Woman Second to Die as Result of Auto Crash

Mrs. A. J. Kranhold,
Appleton, Succumbs;
Another Near Death

Mrs. A. J. Kranhold, 59, 728 W. Fourth street, died at 7 o'clock this morning, the second victim of the truck crash at the intersection of Highways 41 and 47 north of Appleton yesterday afternoon. She suffered chest injuries.

Emil Klein, 65, 1203 W. Lawrence street, driver of the car in which wife, Mrs. Kranhold and Mrs. Anna Maurer, 820 W. Fourth street, were riding, died of injuries shortly after the accident which occurred about 12:30 in the afternoon. Klein's condition today was reported as critical, while Mrs. Maurer's condition was reported somewhat improved.

Klein was driving north on Highway 47 and Alfred Scheid, 38, Milwaukee, was driving a truck west on Highway 41 when the collision occurred at the intersection. Scheid escaped with a shaking up although his truck tipped over and was smashed badly.

An inquest will be held in the two deaths and members of the coroner's jury, drawn yesterday, are Ralph Goggins, Joseph Grassburg, Aaron Zerbel, John Gillespie, Matt Maier and Joseph Drexler.

Probe Child's Death
The jury also will conduct an inquest in the death of 7-year-old Dale, son of Mr. and Mrs. Rexford H. Bradt, 1517 W. Franklin street, who was killed on W. Packard street shortly before 1:30 yesterday afternoon in an accident involving a truck driven by Robert Seidler, 919 W. Barnes avenue. Seidler was going west and the child was crossing the street when the accident occurred.

The Bradt child was born Oct. 11, 1933, at Racine and was a second grade pupil at Washington school. Besides the parents, survivors are a sister, Constance, Appleton; three grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Hale Bradt, Bloomington, Ind.; Mrs. M. I. Enos, Canas, Wash.

Funeral services will be conducted at 4 o'clock Monday afternoon at the St. Joseph church, 1000 W. Main street. Burial will be in Appleton Highland Memorial park. The body may be viewed after Saturday noon at the funeral home.

Born in Appleton
Mrs. Kranhold was born March 19, 1881, in Appleton. She was a member of St. Joseph church, Christian Mothers society, Third Order of St. Francis and the Eagles auxiliary.

Besides the widower, survivors are three daughters, Miss Marie Kranhold, Mrs. Howard Bowers, Appleton; Mrs. Krull, Kaukauna; Robert, Appleton; a sister, Emil Klein, Appleton, and four grandchildren.

Funeral services will be conducted at 10:30 Monday morning at St. Joseph church, the cortege forming at 10 o'clock at Bretschneider funeral home. Burial will be in St. Joseph cemetery.

Wants Low-Income
Farmers Employed in National Defense

Baltimore—(AP)—Chester C. Davis, member of the National Defense Advisory commission, proposed today an estimated 5,000,000 low-income, single cash-crop farmers leave land and go into defense industry.

Davis, commissioner in charge of agricultural division, asserted in address prepared for the annual meeting of the southern states cooperative here that "these men can be drawn into defense production with little or no sacrifice so far as agricultural production is concerned."

"Under existing and prospective conditions," Davis said, "there are too many people trying to make a cash income growing cotton and tobacco for them to draw a satisfactory American standard of living out of it."

"Our maximum defense effort depends in the last analysis on the number of people we can bring into defense production. The great untapped reservoir of manpower in the low-income, single cash-crop agricultural areas of the predominant agricultural states..."

CAR, TRUCK IN FATAL CRASH—Two persons were fatally injured and two others hurt, one critically, when the car and truck shown above crashed at the intersection of Highways 41 and 47 early yesterday afternoon. Emil Klein, 64, Appleton, died shortly after the accident while the second victim, Mrs. A. J. Kranhold, 59, Appleton, died at 7 o'clock this morning. Mrs. Klein is in a critical condition. The other injured person, Mrs. Anna Maurer, 57, Appleton, was in an improved condition today. The Kleins, Mrs. Kranhold and Mrs. Maurer were riding in the Klein car. Alfred Scheid, 38, Milwaukee, driver of the truck, escaped injury. (Post-Crescent Photos.)

Willkie Charges No Effort Made to Cut Costs; FDR Tours Three States

Budget Never Near Balance, Republican Candidate Asserts

Aboard Willkie train in New Jersey—(AP)—Wendell L. Willkie, approaching the end of an 18,000-mile speaking tour, expressed belief today that President Roosevelt had expended more government funds than any other ruler in the world in the same length of time.

From a tiny platform in front of the white-pillared courthouse at New Brunswick, N. J., the Republican presidential nominee declared that his opponent had not lived up to a 1932 platform pledge to cut federal expenses.

"In eight years the federal budget never has approached a balance," Willkie asserted. "No man can balance it today, immediately, but worse than that, there is no attempt to balance it and apparently no desire to balance it."

The current defense program, he predicted, would cost 25 or 30 billion dollars before it is completed. "That cost is going to be piled upon the overwhelming public debt," he continued. Asking what difference this would make to the average person, Willkie said:

"Saturated With Taxes"
"You pay the taxes. Every suit, every hat, every suit of clothes that

French Cabinet
Backs Agreement

Vichy, France—(AP)—The Petain cabinet announced tonight that it had approved unanimously the results of vice Premier Pierre Laval's recent discussions in Paris with German officials on details of France's new "collaboration" with the German-Italian conquerors.

A communique said the cabinet expressed "confident unanimity" in Laval and Chief of State Marshal Philippe Petain in the negotiations with the Germans.

Laval, who now is also foreign minister, explained the discussions at a two and one-half hour cabinet meeting after his return from the Nazi-held French capital.

Government circles said the ministers, particularly Laval, were "extremely satisfied" with the course of the negotiations.

Another said, "The Dutch people are dying under injustice." (The Boers, still speaking Dutch dialects, came to South Africa from Holland more than a century ago and were absorbed into South Africa, now a British dominion, and only after the bitter Boer war at the turn of the century. Many of them still oppose South Africa's participation in the war against Germany.)

Storks Carry Notes
Describing Nazi Rule
From Dutch to Boers

Johannesburg, South Africa—(AP)—Boer farmers in this vicinity report that some of the storks arriving here in their annual 7,000-mile migration from the Netherlands are carrying written messages on the condition of the Dutch under Nazi rule.

One farmer said he untied this scribbled message from the leg of a migrating stork:

"We inhabitants of Bergen-op-Zoom tell you German occupation is just hell."

Another said, "The Dutch people are dying under injustice."

Roosevelt Aid Apologizes to Negro Officer Hurt in Scuffle

New York—(AP)—Mayor LaGuardia said today he considered that an apology by Stephen Early, White House secretary, to James Sloan, New York Negro policeman who was injured in a scuffle near President Roosevelt's train here Monday night, should settle the affair.

"I examined the apology and I think it should settle it," the mayor said. "All the protest is politically inspired by people having no interest in the patrolman."

"A gentleman can do no more than apologize," LaGuardia added. "What would have happened if somebody got by the line (guarding approach to the presidential special)? The officer had orders not to let anybody by. Mr. Early had to catch the train. It was a regrettable meeting between the two irresistible forces.

The mayor said he would continue to inquire into the matter but that he would "eliminate all political pressure which I think is rather unbecoming."

At his home, Sloan said that Chief Police Surgeon Charles J. Dillon had advised him to remain in bed a few more days.

"I haven't received any apology," Sloan said. He replied when asked whether he would accept an apology: "I'm not going to talk about that."

In response to a question about his voting in the forthcoming election, Sloan said he would vote for Roosevelt.

Goes to Pennsylvania,
New York and Ohio
In Campaign Sweep

Washington—(AP)—Opening up the final "big push" of his 1940 campaign, President Roosevelt: got ready today for a quick sweep through New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio.

The territory marked for invasion was politically rich, representing 109 electoral votes—one-fifth of the entire national total. Entering here in mid-afternoon, Mr. Roosevelt will swing through metropolitan Pennsylvania and thence to Cleveland, the biggest city in Ohio.

The first major speech of this final drive was down for tonight (8 p. m. C. S. T.) at the Brooklyn Academy of Music. Tomorrow night (at 8 p. m. C. S. A.) he will speak again, from Cleveland's auditorium, scene of several national political conventions.

Mr. Roosevelt's day yesterday was taken up by work on his speeches, conference with Secretary Hull on foreign affairs, a visit from Archbishop Spellman of New York, and a quick trip in the late afternoon to nearby Bethesda, Md., where he dedicated the new $4,000,000 plant of the National Institute of Health.

He said there that "neither the American people nor their government intend to socialize medical practice any more than they plan to socialize industry."

President Roosevelt said today that he probably would return to Washington Sunday from Cleveland.

Probers Fail to Appear at Inquiry

Washington—(AP)—None of the senate subcommittee showed up today for an announced investigation and any disclosures on alleged supreme court wiretapping were deferred indefinitely.

The scheduled meeting did, however, produce some statements on politics.

Hyman I. Fischbach, a New York attorney representing one of the prospective witnesses, handed reporters a statement in which the witness, Robert C. LaBorde, said an attempt was being made to "smear" the Republican party. The statement said: "The witness was named through an inquiry into alleged tapping of supreme court justices' wires when the Tennessee Valley Authority case was up in 1938."

William F. Maloney, subcommittee counsel, told reporters no politics was involved and that he supposed the "smear charges" were made because of the TVA case time angle.

"I think it is only fair," Maloney said, to state that at this time there is no evidence of Wendell L. Willkie having any personal knowledge of any wiretapping.

Willkie's company, the Commonwealth and Southern, had been active in the TVA controversy.

Turk Chief Says Nation Will Not Enter Conflict

Will Fight
If Attacked,
He Asserts

Bucharest—(AP)—German circles in Rumania today asserted that negotiations for a new Russian-German agreement chiefly concerned with the knotty Balkans and near eastern problems are under way.

Ankara, Turkey—(AP)—President Ismet Inonu of Turkey informed his national assembly today that Turkey would not enter the war now, but was studying the situation in the Mediterranean in collaboration with Great Britain, he elly.

The key to the decision seemed to lie in the president's statement that Turkey's relations with Soviet Russia "are now taking a friendly turn" after "passing through a critical stage."

He reiterated, however, that Turkey would fight instantly if attacked and insisted: "We remain loyal to our friendships, obligations and ties of collaboration."

"Our neighbors, the Greeks, unfortunately have been called into the war and we, with our ally, Great Britain, are studying the situation," said Inonu. "Our country has decided to defend our independence, security and land. This is the greatest pride of our nation and no change has been made in our foreign policy. We have no external ambitions."

Avail Developments
"We have decided to act for the interests of our nation without harming anyone else."

This was interpreted to mean that Turkey, acting probably with the counsel of Soviet Russia, had decided to await developments before going to war. These developments might be a direct attack on Turkey or entrance of Bulgaria into the Greek-Italian war on the side of the axis.

"The war is spreading to a point where the whole world may be involved," Inonu said. "Several countries are under foreign occupation and it appears that this phase may last a long time."

"The youth of the Turkish nation today will make the future wonder at its heroism," he said in an age in which it is possible for only heroes to live. The Turkish nation advances toward the future and security."

Rome Editor
Accuses FDR

Defies Americans to Offer Definite Proof
Of Menace From Axis

Rome—(AP)—Virginia Gayda, authoritative fascist editor, accused President Roosevelt today of initiating an offensive against the axis and held him and his supporters responsible for creation of an "ideological political conflict which is skidding toward belligerence between the United States and the axis."

The editor of Il Giornale d'Italia, who often reflects official fascist opinion, said he was answering a recent speech of United States Secretary of State Cordell Hull.

Hull's speech, he said, "pretended again to change the elementary truth of the facts, inventing an axis menace to America." He invited "these belligerent Americans" to furnish "one single, concrete, documented proof" of this menace.

He repeated, however, that Italy was not interested in the outcome of the United States presidential election.

Spanish Air Mission Is Visiting London

Lisbon—A Spanish air mission headed by Lieutenant-Colonel Juan Ansaldo flew to London today on the British government's invitation to "watch England under German attack."

Air Commander James A. Dixon, British air attaché at Madrid, accompanied the mission, which included two Spanish air force captains.

British Fliers Attack Naples in Raid on Italy's South Mainland

London—(AP)—British bombers attacked the great industrial center of Naples last night in their first raid on the southern mainland of Italy, and hit the railroad station, oil tanks and refineries, the air ministry reported today.

able to "pinpoint" their targets, it said, the British fliers roared over Naples in three waves and, at times, swooped to within 2,000 feet of the city's rooftops to let go their bombs.

The first attackers said they concentrated on the oil refinery and groups of storage tanks at Poggio Reale, on Naples' southern outskirts; the second on the railroad station and junction; the third on anti-aircraft batteries and searchlights, silencing one battery.

Heavy bombs were dropped and many explosions were followed by

Survivors of Freighter Sunk by Nazi Raider Saw Comrades Die

Nassau, the Bahamas—(AP)—After spending 70 days at sea in a tiny open boat, two British seamen have reached the safety of British soil in a voyage rivaling that of Captain William Bligh following the famous mutiny of the Bounty.

The two men, Wilbert Roy Widdicombe, 24, and Robert George Tapscott, 19, were believed to be the only survivors of the 5,596-ton freighter Anglo-Saxon, which was sunk by a Nazi raider about 500 miles southeast of the Azores Aug. 21.

Popped up in bed here, the cheerful Widdicombe, who lost 80 pounds during the amazing 2,500-mile trans-Atlantic voyage, told how seven men hurriedly climbed into the 16-foot open boat when the raider opened fire. Two of them died of machine-gun wounds inflicted by the raider. Two others, crazed by heat and thirst, leaped overboard, another slashed his throat.

"When we took to the boat we had 20 pounds of biscuits, four gallons of water, 11 tins of condensed milk and 16 pounds of tinned beef," Widdicombe said.

Fish Washed Into Boat
"This lasted 15 days. Gradually the other three men started to lose their minds and one night two jumped overboard. The next day the other cut his throat."

"We just sailed and drifted endlessly. We ran into three hurricanes. We had no fishing tackle, but one sail fish and one gar fish washed into the boat and we ate them raw."

"Seaweed was our only food for most of the journey," Widdicombe continued. "Tapscott was sinking fast when he sighted a white beach and ran the boat ashore. Then we staggered and crawled to some trees and fainted."

"The next thing we realized we were surrounded by dark kindly faces but didn't know where we were until we were addressed in English to our unbounded relief."

That was at nearby Eleuthera island. They were brought here by plane yesterday, burned almost black by the sun.

Widdicombe, the stronger of the two when they were found, said they had only rain water to drink most of the voyage, and had no water at all the last eight days.

Bligh's famous voyage after the mutiny in 1789 covered 3,600 miles, but he and his men completed it in 47 days, 23 less than the time Tapscott and Widdicombe took.

'Got Drunk,' Juror Says To Explain His Absence

Milwaukee—(AP)—Carroll Casey, 33, who disappeared while serving as a juror in circuit court, told Judge Gustave G. Gehrz today that "I got drunk."

"I went to sleep in a Racine tavern," Casey said by way of explanation for his failure to show up for the trial last Wednesday.

The court found Casey guilty of contempt, discharged him from the jury panel, ordered him to pay the $7 witness fees in the case in which he had caused a mistrial, and reserved decision until Dec. 7, on the question of further penalty.

Michigan Man Asks
$350,000 in Action
Against LaGuardia

New York—(AP)—Mayor F. H. LaGuardia was served today with a summons and complaint in a $350,000 suit brought in behalf of Benjamin H. Owens, whose necktie the mayor pulled in Detroit Oct. 21 while there for a campaign rally.

Owens, a face box inspector, of Ferndale, Mich., was in the crowd before the Detroit city hall where LaGuardia was speaking in behalf of President Roosevelt in his capacity as chairman of the National Independent Voters League.

The mayor became irked at a question put to him by Owens seized him and twisted his neck-tie.

Veteran of 15 years' service in the department, Pearson left a widow and a small son.

Greeks Claim
Italians are Driven Back

Rome—(AP)—Armored units forming the spearhead of the Italian attack against Greece were declared tonight by fascist authorities apparently to have penetrated Greece's Metaxas line at some points.

Stefani, the Italian news agency, said the invaders in the Ioannina sector had conquered a populous northern district containing 79 villages.

Athens, Greece—(AP)—Tank-supported Italian infantry attacks in northwestern Greece have been "repulsed everywhere," the Greek general staff asserted today, and the small Greek navy has moved alongshore to bombard the invading fascists.

Greek planes also joined in the fighting, a communique said, bombing "from a low altitude." Naval guns were said to have shelled "successfully" the Italian right wing (closest the sea) for more than an hour yesterday.

The communique said the fascist forces suffered losses in yesterday's fighting and added that "prisoners were taken."

For the second time in as many days the general staff reported that "irregulars are collaborating with the enemy" without further identification.

Continued Italian air-raids yesterday on the port of Patras were reported officially and the toll of Monday's opening raid on the city reached 100 dead and 250 injured as Premier John Metaxas addressed a message of sympathy to the city.

Raps 'Cowardly' Attack
"A formation of raiders attacked an open town in a cowardly manner and the civilian population was bombed and machine-gunned from 600 feet," Metaxas declared.

"The innocent bloodshed galvanizes our faith in the sanctity of the struggle and affords to the eyes of the civilized world a measure of the manliness and honesty of our enemy, who believes that with known murderous means he will intimidate a brave people..."

"... blood of the dead citizens of Patras will be revenged by the nation."

Aristides Demetrios, undersecretary of labor and general secretary of the Greek National Labor Confederation, called on workers throughout the world in a broadcast last night to come to the aid of Greece in her struggle against Italy.

Urges Boycott
The text of his appeal was sent to United States labor organizations.

He suggested a boycott of Italian products and urged that workers demand that their governments ban exports of raw materials and munitions to Italy.

King George II conferred yesterday with Metaxas and Generalissimo Alexander Papagos on the war situation.

Effective tomorrow, Greek newspapers will be reduced to two pages.

More Nazi Activity
Sofia, Bulgaria—(AP)—Indications of increasing German military activity in Rumania—nearest base for any Nazi attack upon Italian-occupied Greece—stirred fears here today of complications which might involve this country in the war.

As the Italian offensive against Greece entered its fifth day without evidence of notable success, unofficial reports from Rumania said the German armed forces there had reached a new high level of strength.

Although given no credence by government officials, rumors persisted that "German troops may go through here within 10 days" en route to the Greek border.

Sharing attention with rumors of possible German intervention in the Italian-Greek conflict was Turkey's attitude toward the struggle. The Istanbul newspaper Vatan said the Turkish people "will not hesitate to assume their great historical responsibility if the duty is imposed upon them."

Bulgaria Neutral
The Bulgarian government itself adhered strictly to hands off policy, making no move to take advantage of the Greek plight by pressing its long-standing claims for territorial revisions.

Bulgaria long has sought to obtain from Greece on ou'let to the Aegean sea, which she claims she was promised in post-World war settlements.

3rd Party Complicates Ballot in Two States

By the Associated Press
Chicago—The 1940 campaign has encountered third-party complications in two important north-central states—Wisconsin and Minnesota.

Wisconsin's Progressive senator, Robert M. LaFollette, seeking to retain a senate seat he has held since 1925, has tied up with the Roosevelt-Wallace forces in an attempt to break the grip Republicans fastened on the state two years ago. President Roosevelt carried Wisconsin in 1932 and 1936 with the aid of Progressives. The alignment has been renewed, but some local Progressive and Democratic groups have come out for Wendell Willkie, Republican presidential candidate.

Moreover, Henry A. Wallace, Democratic vice presidential nominee, lauded LaFollette recently for his "untiring support." The Democratic party in the state already was split into factions and the endorsement widened the breach.

Republican strategists recall that their total in the September primary was more than the combined total for the Progressive and Democratic candidates.

Opposed by Clausen
LaFollette is opposed by Fred Clausen, (R) Horicon manufacturer, and James E. Finnegan, (D), Gov.

ernor Julius P. Heil, Republican running for a second term, competes against Orland S. Loomis (P) and Francis E. McGovern (D).

In Minnesota, Democrats and Farmer-Laborites—with the exception of several one-time leaders who swung away from the president—are pooling their efforts to keep the state in the Roosevelt column.

Governor Harold E. Stassen, keynote at the Republican national convention who compiled more votes than all other gubernatorial aspirants combined in the three-party September primary, is campaigning for the governorship and Willkie, too. Senator Henrik Shipstead, standing for reelection as a Republican after 18 years in the senate as a Farmer-Laborite, introduced Willkie at a Minneapolis rally. On the Democratic side, Elmer J. Ryan, congressman bidding for the same post again, is openly opposed to a third term for the president.

Gubernatorial contestants are Stassen, Hjalmar Petersen (F-L) and Edward Murphy (D). In the senatorial race are Shipstead, Elmer A. Benson (F-L) and John E. Regan (D).

Wallace Raps Willkie for War Forecast

Says GOP 'Stoops To Anything' for Victory at Polls

New York—(AP)—The Republican party is "so desperate that it will stoop to anything to stave off defeat," says Democratic Vice Presidential Nominee Henry A. Wallace.

He made that statement before an American Labor party rally last night in reply to Wendell L. Willkie's contention that, if President Roosevelt were reelected, the country—on the basis of Mr. Roosevelt's "past pledges and performances"—might expect war by next April.

"We are arming for peace," Wallace declared. "We are arming to be strong that we will not be threatened."

He reiterated his charge that Nazi organizations are going to "cast all of the votes they can muster" for Willkie next Tuesday.

Adolf Hitler, Wallace said, "has decided that if Roosevelt can be defeated, England would be discouraged; South America would turn away from the United States, and he would have an easier time with his somewhat delayed plans for world conquest."

The former secretary of agriculture maintained that Willkie's campaign speeches indicate "he is not qualified by experience or judgment for the difficult task of keeping America secure and at peace," and that Willkie had shown "a complete confusion of mind" upon foreign issues.

Even if the Republican candidate were a man of experience and proved wisdom," Wallace said, "and even if the other Republican leaders had not discredited their statesmanship by so mistaking the trend of foreign affairs. It would be a dangerous matter to have a period of 11 weeks between the election and the inauguration of a new president, while the European war hangs in the balance."

Charges Heil Flouts Americanism Concepts

Barron—(AP)—Campaigning as the Progressive candidate for attorney general, Otto F. Christenson asserted here last night that Governor Heil had flouted "concepts of true Americanism."

Christenson said the Republican chief executive advocated a "political test" for students entering the University of Wisconsin, favored the finger-printing of state employees and established a research department in the state service to get rid of persons who did not agree with his ideas of government.

Anti-German Unrest Mounting in France

BY DEWITT MACKENZIE
New York—(AP)—I have received unimpeachable information that there is in France a growing anti-German unrest, accompanied by actual under-cover sabotage—a condition which casts still further light on Herr Hitler's anxiety to bring that country into the Nazi fold and secure the cooperation of the general public.

One suspects that the fuhrer is beginning to find much truth in the old Chinese adage that he who rides a tiger finds it difficult to dismount.

The Nazi chief has plowed a large portion of Europe under with his might war-machine without much opposition. He probably will plow more under, for it would be stupid not to recognize the terrific force which he wields.

But in every instance where he has occupied a country by force he has found that while he could break physical resistance he couldn't destroy the spirit of the nation as a whole. The situation in France is symptomatic of that existing in other parts of occupied Europe—a potential danger of vast proportions.

Need Armed Rule
This can only be kept in hand by armed over-lordship, and that will be increasingly true as the conquered countries recover from the shock of assault. Hitler's "new order" is calculated to take care of that, if he can get it to functioning while bombs still fall and privation flaps about over Europe like a bloated vampire bat.

I understand that there has been a remarkable undercurrent change of sentiment in France in recent weeks. As you know, the country was utterly smashed by its terrible military defeat, and at that time there was much bitterness against the British (a flame fed eagerly by the Germans) because of a rather widespread feeling that the French had been "let down" by their ally.

That feeling has undergone much change, although there still is an anti-British party which may be said to be represented by Vice Premier Laval who has proclaimed that he believes democracy is dead in all countries and is working overtime to swing France into the Nazi camp. Only yesterday Roy P. Porter, an Associated Press correspondent, reported in a Paris dispatch that during an interview he received the definite impression from the French leader that he earnestly desired the defeat of England.

However, there has been a widespread shift of sentiment in favor of England. This has been due mainly to the determined and successful resistance to invasion of

DISTRICT ATTORNEY

To the Voters of Outagamie County: —
On November 5th I am submitting my record as your District Attorney for your approval. Do you know a few of the many things that have been accomplished by me as your District Attorney in the past four years?
I have collected over $50,000 in old poor claims that were left over from previous administrations.
I have handled and directed the taking of tax deeds on a business-like basis so that the county is now cashing in on tax certificates long lying idle and formerly a burden on the treasury and now an asset. One of these was the Outagamie Mill in Kaukauna.
Over $100,000 has been collected on old tax certificates on my advice. All these collections have helped keep your taxes down.
The County Board rules were completely revised under my supervision to the end that the Board can now better handle county affairs.
I have won 99% of the criminal cases brought before the courts of Outagamie County. And everyone has been fairly and impartially tried.
I do not boast idly when I quote the county board members who have said many times that "Dohr is the best District Attorney we have ever had." Surely there must be some reason for their saying that.
Don't be deceived when it is said that no investigation is going on in attempting to apprehend the person or persons who committed the three murders in the county. Because of its very nature, no publicity can possibly be given to the intensive investigation that has been going on. After all the F. B. I. doesn't give out any publicity until a crime has been solved. Any candidate who tells you that "Little or nothing is being done," is deliberately falsifying.
I am on the independent ticket because the members of the county board, the governing body of Outagamie County, leading lawyers, doctors, business men and women, and many of the labor leaders approved of my record enough to come to me personally and say "Ray, won't you run on the Independent Ticket?"
During the past four years more has been accomplished in the District Attorney's office than in the ten years that have gone before. Shouldn't you take that into consideration and cast your ballot for DOHR on the INDEPENDENT TICKET, the last name in the Independent column.

15 are Authorized to Engage in Frequency Modulation Programs

Washington—(AP)—The federal communications commission yesterday authorized 15 applicants geographically scattered throughout the country to engage in frequency modulation broadcasting on a commercial basis as soon as they are able to do so.

"The granting of these licenses," said Chairman James Lawrence Fly, "marks an important milestone in the continued advance of the radio industry."

Frequency modulation is a system of high frequency broadcasting designed to eliminate static and increase fidelity of reception.

Some FM stations have been operating on an experimental basis but yesterday's action was the first by the commission authorizing commercial operation.

More than 50 applications for FM commercial operation still are pending, Fly said these would be acted upon as expeditiously as possible.

The commission said the authorizations would bring FM service to millions of persons. The authorizations include:

Detroit—The Evening News Association.

Chicago—Zenith Radio Corporation.

Milwaukee—The Journal Company.

New York City—The National Broadcasting Company, William G. H. Finch, and Marcus Loew Book agency.

Turks Stay Out of War; Better Relations Seen With Russians

Turkey will not enter the Balkan war now, President Ismet Inonu announced today, at the same time countering any threat of Rome-Berlin axis plans by proclaiming that Turko-Russian relations "now have taken a friendly turn."

On the Balkan war front, Stefani, the official Italian news agency, reported a 35-mile fascist advance into the Ioannina sector of northwest Greece, along with the capture of 79 Grecoian villages.

Turkey's president, in a speech to the national assembly at Ankara, said Turkey and her ally, Great Britain, "are studying the situation in the Balkans."

The nation's relations with soviet Russia, he said, had "gone through a critical period" but now are much improved.

With her reported "2,000,000 bayonets," Turkey has openly defied any axis attempt to use Turkey as a passageway to the Near East, but has maintained a hands-off policy under pressure from Russia.

The new "friendly turn" in Soviet Turkish relations might indicate that Russia has guaranteed support to Turkey in the event of an axis attack on Turkey—in return for Turkey keeping out of the Greek-Italian war.

Stefani's report of a 35-mile Italian thrust—which would indicate that the city of Ioannina (Janina) now is under fascist siege or that Mussolini's invaders are not advancing on the shortest line from the Albanian frontier—conflicted with official Greek reports.

The Greek high command declared that tank-supported Italian troops in northwest Greece had been "repulsed everywhere" in the five-day-old Balkan conflict.

British R. A. F. bombers attacked southern Italy for the first time, bombing the ancient Tyrrhenian seaport of Naples near the "ankle" of the Italian boot.

The Naples attack, striking at oil tanks and other military objectives in the Naples area where great blast furnaces and steel mills are situated, followed a rising clamor in the British press for stronger blows against Italy.

"Italy is the weakest link in the axis," said the London News Chronicle. "Smash it, and more than half the battle is won."

Similarly, Lord Beaverbrook's Daily Express declared:

"Living women and children matter more to us than the antiquities of Rome. If bombing Rome is to mean an earlier victory for the Greeks and ourselves, we should begin it tomorrow and continue it until the Italians see sense."

Premier Mussolini's high command said the raid on Naples cost one killed, five wounded.

Belgrade dispatches said the Italians were hammering at Greek positions in Ploderia pass, at the northeast end of the Albanian frontier.

The fascist columns, supported by heavy artillery and warplanes, apparently had as their first objective the Greek city of Florina, 30 miles distant, and thence to the key Aegean port of Salonika which might be used as the base for a drive to the Turkish Dardanelles.

Greek mountain gunners, posted in sniping stations blasted out of solid rock, were reported spraying the Italian troops with a murderous point-blank fire as they attempted to advance along narrow mountain roads.

Unconfirmed Greek reports circulated in Belgrade that British warplanes, accompanied by a few of Greece's tiny air force, had bombed Tirana, capital of the Italian "puppet state" of Albania, and other Albanian cities.

Other British aid to the little Balkan kingdom was evident, however. The British fleet was said to have completed sowing a network of mines around Salonika and other Grecian harbors, and a steady stream of British supply ships and transports were reported steaming under convoy across the Mediterranean.

Halloween is Quiet in City; Parade Popular

Overturned garbage cans, roared windows, and clanging doorbells constituted the principal antics during Halloween night in Appleton, with few serious disturbances reported to the police department. Many a resident turned on his porch light to discourage any efforts by the city's younger set to trespass property or arouse the household. A good many of the youngsters dressed up in the funniest, snappiest, and most original costumes they could think of last night and went on a parade. The city's Halloween costume parade drew a good-sized crowd of onlookers during its progress down College avenue and during the awarding of prizes at Oneida street across from Soldiers square.

Mayor John Goodland, Jr., awarded prizes following the parade, which was directed by Mrs. Hazel F. Bannister, WPA county recreation supervisor. Police this morning reported "just a few complaints" last evening and said that property damage was slight, compared with more stormy Halloween nights in former years.

Prizes for costumes in the parade were as follows: Most original costumes, Mary Lou McGillan, Hone and Mary Helen Quella, Sheila Zapp, Benny Wicand, Angela Kraus; neatest costumes, Skipper Sahli, Richard Verhooven, Jimmy Rogers, Esther Mae Otto, Marilyn Alsch; funniest costumes, Audrey Schuessler, Betty Winterfeldt, Gladys and George Riedl, David Reimer, Hilma Ann Harper, Darlyn Harper, George Goemans. Little Eddie Steens was awarded a special prize. Dressed as a soldier, he gave a baton-twirling demonstration.

Lorraine Junce entertained with accordion selections, Helen Shebliske and Richard Verhooven sang. Judges were Mrs. Bertha Barry, Miss Ruth McKennan, and Mrs. Gertrude Fenner Morrison.

Plaster Work Started At College Quadrangle

The plaster is going on the handsome new Lawrence quadrangle buildings this week. The Oliver W. Wierdsma company of Milwaukee has completed much of the exterior work on the five stone buildings which will house the college's fraternities. The company expects to have the quadrangle ready for occupancy in January.

Turns From Tour

Dean John S. Mills of Lawrence College was scheduled to return to Appleton from a tour of eastern colleges for the purpose of studying administrative procedure. He received a Carnegie grant for study tour. The Lawrence dean will leave Nov. 15 for a month's visit to western colleges.

Continue Efforts Toward Uniform Speed Regulations

Post-Crescent Madison bureau Madison—The confusion over recent demands of the state motor vehicle division that Wisconsin local governments install uniform speed restrictions within their municipal limits was cleared up here today as division officials admitted that they have no legal authority to interfere with local authorities' efforts to set speed limits below the maximum prescribed by state law. As a result, according to Homer Bell, director of enforcement in the division, the state office is now trying to "persuade" local units of government to increase their speed limits to the 25 and 35 mile limits set by the state law.

At present, he pointed out, there are more than 250 cities and villages in Wisconsin which have posted speed limit signs varying from 15, 20, 25 and 30 to 35 miles an hour. There have been varying interpretations on the meaning of the state law, which provides that the maximum possible speed within the corporate limits of any municipality shall be 25 miles an hour, and that outlying districts shall impose a maximum speed of 35 miles an hour.

Will Continue Efforts Originally, it appeared that the motor vehicle division was trying to force local units to bring their various limits up to the state maximum. The law was interpreted to mean that the speeds cited were both minimum and maximum speeds through municipal boundaries.

Today, however, the department has decided that it cannot legally interfere with a city government which adopts an ordinance setting a lower maximum, but announces that it will continue to persuade local officials to bring up their limits for the sake of uniformity throughout the state and to aid practical enforcement.

Bell is urging uniform ordinances setting maximum speeds at 25 miles an hour through cities, and 35 miles an hour in outlying districts where on both sides of the highway there is an average of not less than 500 feet between buildings fronting the street. Only exception is in districts where there are schools. In those cases, Bell suggests portable signs kept in place only during school hours, with suitable reductions in speed limits during those hours.

"I am sure that there is no good purpose in posting speed limits of 15 and 20 miles per hour, which are never enforced and seldom observed," he said.

Not Practical "A drive over the streets of any community at exactly 15 miles per hour or 20 miles per hour will demonstrate that such speeds are not practical today, and that the motorist and public must have reasonable regulations prescribed for them before they can be expected to observe them."

Bell has outlined his program to all municipal officials in the state.

Department Cooperating With 'Cheese for Christmas' Plan

The state department of agriculture is cooperating with many agencies in the state for the third annual "Cheese for Christmas" program, according to information received by County Agent J. F. Magnus. Each year sales of natural cheese have increased during this drive, and this year it is hoped that more than a million pounds will be distributed during the holiday season.

With Wisconsin producing half of all the cheese made in the nation it is as appropriate for citizens of this state to send Christmas packages of Wisconsin natural cheese to their friends as it is for citizens of fruit-growing states to send Christmas boxes of fruit, the department points out.

The Christmas cheese campaign is further pointed out, introduces a leading Wisconsin product to thousands of consumers and tends to step up the demand for this product throughout the year.

To insure a sufficient supply of natural cheese to meet the demand for the holiday package, contracts have been signed with some of Wisconsin's leading cheesemakers, it was revealed.

Added impetus has been given the 1940 Christmas cheese campaign by the state Junior Chamber of Commerce. This association, through its member groups in 33 Wisconsin communities, will assist in promoting the drive.

8:30 Saturday morning, All Souls day, and at 9:30 Sunday morning St. Paul Lutheran church, Stephentown, will have services at 8:45 Sunday morning, while the Methodist church will conduct services at 10 o'clock.

A new and revised bulletin on the harvesting and storing of vegetables, written by J. G. Moore, professor of horticulture of the college of agriculture, has been received by Miss Irene Skutley, county home demonstration agent. Copies may be obtained from her office.

Missouri Joins Shift To Willkie Bandwagon

BY DR. GEORGE GALLUP
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J. — Kentucky and Missouri, border states along the top rim of the Solid South, both show a gain for Wendell Willkie as does southwest state of Oklahoma, in the latest sampling by the American Institute of Public Opinion covering the period Oct. 23-29.

Two of these three states, Kentucky and Oklahoma, continue to be in President Roosevelt's column, but Missouri shifts over into the Willkie column for the first time in the campaign, although by a small margin.

The trend since the Institute's previous report Oct. 27, which was based on interviewing between Oct. 14 and 23, is as follows:

	Today	Oct. 27
Missouri	49% 51%	51% 49%
Roosevelt	49%	51%
Willkie	51%	49%
Kentucky	54% 57%	46 42
Roosevelt	54%	57%
Willkie	46	42
Oklahoma	55% 62%	45 38
Roosevelt	55%	62%
Willkie	45	38

The proportion of voters still undecided in the three states is: Missouri 7 per cent, Kentucky 7 per cent, Oklahoma 10 per cent.

Special interest attaches to the shift of Missouri because it is one of six states which, if carried by Willkie, would give him victory in the electoral college. These six states are New York, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, Ohio, Missouri, and Connecticut. With 149 electoral votes, which if added to Willkie's 121 electoral votes in the Institute's Oct. 27 report, would give him 270, 4 more than enough to win. So far Willkie is leading by a small margin in three of these six states, New York, Connecticut and Missouri.

As reported two days ago, the Willkie trend throughout the nation during the week Oct. 22-27 has put the Republican candidate within striking distance of victory, because it pushed the Roosevelt popular vote percentage down from 54.5 to 53 per cent. This is only one per cent more than the percentage needed for Roosevelt to win, which, owing to the surplus Democratic majorities in the south, is approximately 52 per cent.

Sampling surveys are subject to a normal expectancy of error, which in recent elections has averaged 4 per cent. The Institute has pointed out that many unsurveyable factors such as the activities of political machines, the effect of weather on election day, and the relative

Discover Meats are Rich in Vitamin B6

Add one more to the list of B complex vitamins found in meat. It is vitamin B6, according to a bulletin received by County Agent J. F. Magnus. The others, already proved abundant in meat, are thiamin, riboflavin, nicotinic acid and pantothenic acid.

This score for meat has been made by the work of three scientists at the University of Wisconsin—H. A. Waisman, L. M. Henderson and Conrad Elvehjem, working in cooperation with the National Live Stock and Meat board.

The Wisconsin trio found that while most of these vitamins are unusually plentiful in such internal organs as liver and kidney, and only moderately abundant in the muscle tissue which makes up the popular cuts of meat, vitamin B6 is even higher in muscle than in internal organs. This group of investigators is convinced that muscle meat compares favorably with yeast and other materials considered to be exceptionally good sources of the factor.

Turnout of voters in each party, must be taken into account in interpreting any survey figures, including those of today.

The Institute is now compiling state-by-state returns, which will be supplemented by a special telephone survey this week-end. Groups of states will be reported as the returns come in and a final 48-state roundup will be published next Monday.

Permit Is Needed to Auction Bee Equipment

Auctioneers handling farm auction sales where bees or used bee equipment are to be offered for sale were reminded this week by E. L. Chambers, chief of the state plant industry division in a bulletin to County Agent J. F. Magnus, that state law requires that a permit be obtained before such material can be sold.

Purpose of the law, Chambers said, is to prevent the spread of dangerous bee diseases from one apiary to another and to protect areas in which county-wide clean-up campaigns have been in progress for more than 10 years.

Retailers Plan for Yuletide Decorations

Willkie and the Wisconsin Progressives

The letter in the Forum tonight states the position of many, and probably a majority, of the Wisconsin Progressives. If Senator LaFollette were not running for reelection and considered it good political strategy to give a quiet mulling lip service to the Third Term it is inconceivable that the intelligent and horny-handed Progressives who have generally been clean-minded and practical, should support the first piece of royalty in America since 1776.

Never did Wisconsin Progressive leaders swallow such a bitter, vomit dose of concentrated castor oil. But in their behalf it must be said that having bent the head in token of fealty to the Third Term they have dismissed the subject from their discussions, probably because they never had a more distasteful one.

The President has used all the power, the wealth and the showmanship of his great office to attach Senator LaFollette to his gilded chariot. He has entertained him on those wondrous trips down the Potomac. Who ever quaffed wine while the moon was shining upon the waters and failed to be mellowed? Flattery and publicity, both alike dear to the politician's heart, have been poured out by the Third Term to try to hold him like LaFollette and Hiram Johnson. But when the syrup didn't stick the venom was substituted.

The declaration of Philip LaFollette when he launched the national Progressive party, although it did not mention the Third Term or the New Deal, literally tore to shreds the wastage and the wanton looterism of the Roosevelt policies, and did so in about the same language one might expect from Mr. Willkie.

It is a good sign of honest men and independent thinkers, and proof of a vigorous heritage, to see Progressive leaders in this state move over to the Willkie side. But it is even better to observe how clearly they understand that the Roosevelt policies are not progressive and although delightfully baptized "liberal" by their parent they are as reactionary as anything ever written alongside the deepest gold vault on Wall Street.

The Poles and "My Ambassador"

Both Mr. Willkie and Mr. Roosevelt have remained calm as the sprint down the home stretch comes in view.

But many other candidates and their active supporters have not.

It is unfair to blame men who are in the spotlight for losing their heads under the terrific stress of a campaign but it would be even more unwise to neglect noting the fact.

Personal abuse, wild and unsupported charges, violent losses of temper, physical attacks and extreme and unreasonable promises are all symptoms of physical, nervous or mental instability. But they may also be mere indications of anger and resentment at the realization that defeat is at the elbow.

Many administration big-wigs are acting like kittens nursed on raw meat. The Little Flower, usually serene, now jabbars like a wild man and physically assaults hecklers asking decent questions. Boss Flynn, ordinarily cool, now goes from a fiery rage into a blue funk and scratches his toes when his ears tickle. And say Tommy the Cork the Power behind the Throne, has tossed his bantering manner aside as he grins his teeth with this sort of flaccid denunciation:

"Fighting with a business man is like fighting with a Polek. You can give no quarter."

Of course Corcoran would not wantonly insult the Poles. Neither would Mr. Roosevelt purposely call attention to his autocratic power by referring to Mr. Kennedy as "my ambassador to England" as he did Wednesday night. If the campaign keeps on he may be calling the rest of us "my subjects."

These are just indications that the Praetorian army and its leader are in full retreat, angry, anxious and desperate.

The European Mentality

The suggestions of Mussolini's newspaper that we may profit by sharing the British empire if we will merely stand idly by and permit the Axis to destroy it is cynical beyond words but, if it does not express the views of all Europeans, it certainly states correctly the attitude that has prevailed in many spots on that unhappy continent for long. Italian journalists could never appreciate that their proposal would be looked upon in this country as base beyond measure. German rulers, in 1914, were non-plussed when we did not invade Canada. What an opportunity was lost, they thought.

The existence of this sort of reasoning, and the failure to comprehend it in America, have jointly created a condition dangerous to ourselves when we enter into diplomatic deals with Europe. Our experience heretofore has been very costly to us. But to view our government blithely undisturbed as it proceeds in much the same manner it did 23 years ago is to see a disinclination to learn from the most expensive and pointed experience in our history.

A Warship of 1776

There has been brought up from the bottom of Lake Champlain one of the colonists' war vessels that was sunk in 1776 by British gunfire. This ship, but three months old when it plunged to the bottom, was called the Philadelphia. At the time her fate overcame her she was under command of General Benedict Arnold who was still a patriot. Built of green oak her massive timbers seem little affected by the generations that have passed.

Up forward there was a 12-pound cannon that was loaded when she went down while on her port and starboard sides she was equipped with 9-pounders. British cannon had made holes clean through her and one big cannon ball was found securely lodged in her side. One of her masts was still upright, the brick fire-place amidships at which the meals for her men were prepared was intact and her deck and holds were littered with cooking utensils, muskets and other relics.

But this rather important war vessel of the inland seas was only 54 feet in length with a 15-foot beam. Her first and final battle was fought but four miles from Plattsburg. The British fleet consisted of 28 ships. On the face of things it seemed like a British victory since of the 14 American vessels engaged 10 were sunk. But the Yankees were not downhearted. They claimed victory out of this apparent defeat. And they argued it long and stubbornly. Although their fleet was destroyed they pointed to the fact that they had so fearfully damaged the English fleet that it never again throughout that long war was able to operate with any effectiveness.

So though they were whipped they found solace in their foe's wounds and their own stubborn denial of defeat.

"From the Smoke Into the Smoother"

In the name of patriotism let every tongue remain silent at the boggle of drawing the draft numbers. Even to call attention to the fact that 6 numbers were omitted from the fish-bowl or receptacle may reach the stature of appeasement.

Let carping critics restrain their hot breath. If they knew the truth they might find that this was the best case of efficiency at Washington in 8 years.

Of course if the absent numbers had been included No. 158 might not have been drawn. The absent numbers might have come first. As a lottery you have a wash-out when someone keeps part of the numbers in his desk. But it could have been worse.

And perhaps it is a blessing in disguise. It will warn the young men entering service, that they mustn't expect too much. When the breeches are not available for the uniform, they will not grieve. When the commissary hasn't any meat they may say, "Who expected any?" And when they find 3-inch shells for 6-inch guns a sergeant may be ready with the quip, "Use two of them at a time, Buddy."

Our national blunders are as sturdy and dependable as the oak—in blundering.

The Man Who Wrote the Declaration of Independence

Frequently Thomas Jefferson's warning to his countrymen against a Third Term have been printed. These are the warnings to be found in official state papers. But they are not all.

For Jefferson's second term expired under circumstances of world confusion much like those prevailing today. And men argued with him that an emergency exists. And The Great Tradition should be set aside. To Henry Guest on the 4th of January, 1809 Thomas Jefferson replied like this:

"I am sensible of the kindness of your rebuke on my determination to retire from office at a time when our country is laboring under difficulties truly great. But if the principle of rotation be a sound one, as I conscientiously believe it to be with respect to this office, no pretext should ever be permitted to dispense with it, because there never will be a time when real difficulties will not exist, and furnish a plausible pretext for dispensation."

If we smash The Great Tradition why not complete the work and cut the Declaration of Independence into shreds and stamp the Bill of Rights underfoot?

A Verse for Today

By Anne Campbell

QUOTING JOE LOUIS

He has no gift for eloquence. His words are small and plain. But what he said about defense Comes back to me again:

The DAILY WASHINGTON MERRY GO ROUND

BY DREW PEARSON AND ROBERT S. ALLEN
Washington—To analyze the Axis drive in the Mediterranean one must keep in mind the basic policy Hitler outlined to his general staff in the early days of the war.

He decreed that it was better to lose three million men in the first year of the war than four million men in four years of long drawn out suffering.

What he now sees is the unwelcome prospect of a long struggle in which the synthetically cooked up morale of the German people would be pitted against the dogged determination of the British. That is why he is so vigorously reshuffling the war map with the idea of shutting off Suez and Gibraltar, then cutting off the British Far Eastern trade route around Africa at Dakar.

He wants to make the odds so overwhelming, at least on paper, that the British will yield to a dictated peace. Unquestionably the odds against the Empire are serious, not only on paper but in fact.

Most U. S. military observers agree that Hitler can take both Suez and Gibraltar unless the Russians actively intervene, but it is doubtful, regardless of the odds, that Hitler can force his own peace on the British. Inside fact is that sub rosa peace feelers have been put out again and again for some time.

Usually they come from Swedish sources, some of them are conveyed by prominent Frenchmen, but always are vague on an on-and-off, but-and-when basis. They are just persistent enough, however, to indicate that Hitler would like to make peace if he could pretty much dictate the terms. And those terms might well mean a free hand with the British fleet for Hitler to penetrate Latin America.

After all, the Nazi argument regarding this can be very convincing to the British. Why should England and Germany, the argument runs, destroy their factories and set back their trade for years, only to let the United States take advantage of the situation by extending itself in Latin America? Why not patch up a peace on the basis of the Far East for Britain and Latin America for Germany? There is plenty of room in the two areas for both and no reason why the United States should spread a flimsy Monroe Doctrine over an empty continent.

So runs the German argument, and it can be made very plausible to beleaguered and desperate British business. However, there is not much chance of it being accepted now. But should American aid to Britain diminish, then the British appeasement group might have its way.

CENSORING JOHN L.
During most of his life, John L. Lewis has refused to take censorship or dictation from anyone. But before delivering his famous radio broadcast for Wendell Willkie last week, he meekly bowed before the Republicans and permitted at least one extract in his speech to be deleted. He had submitted the draft two days in advance to Republican leaders, since they were paying about $45,000 for his radio time.

The censored portion of the speech referred to the pro-labor congressmen and senators who are up for re-election this year. Because these men have gone down the line for labor, the CIO has been giving them every possible help. Twenty-six of these congressmen are in coal mining districts, are strong for the United Mine Workers, but also are pro-Roosevelt.

Lewis had written a plea in his speech for labor to re-elect the friends of labor—referring to these men. However, since these 26 pro-labor congressmen are being opposed by Republicans, the GOP leaders objected. Lewis bowed to their censorship.

Note—John L. Lewis' offer to resign as head of the CIO if Roosevelt is re-elected was as empty as his offer to step down from the CIO if Bill Green would quit as head of the AFL. In either case, Lewis would remain head of the powerful United Mine Workers, a job which pays him $25,000 plus expenses reputed to be around $60,000.

Lewis is sure of re-election as head of the Miners, since the nominations closed in August, and he is the only candidate. Vice President Phil Murray was supported by 198 locals for the presidency, but refused to oppose Lewis.

WILLKIE AND COPPER
On the platform of The New York Herald-Tribune Forum, when Wendell Willkie made his attack on Roosevelt for knocking the pins from under 17-cents-a-pound copper, was Defense Commissioner Leon Henderson, price expert who was chiefly responsible for the price cut. The vital defense metal is now selling around 12 cents.

When Willkie concluded, Henderson turned and saw seated directly behind him the head of one of the leading brass companies, who the day before had sent Henderson a long telegram complaining about the price of copper. He had asked for a conference on the question of lifting the 4-cent tariff so he could buy 8-cent foreign copper.

Standing out on the business executive's lapel was a big Willkie button. Eying it, Henderson observed with a mischievous grin:

"Well, fancy meeting you here! I really would have enjoyed this speech if I'd known you were in back of me. What did you think of your candidate's views on the price of copper?"

"I'll tell you when I see you in Washington," was the do reply.

MERRY-GO-ROUND

Now is the period of an election campaign when both sides let loose the below-the-belt stuff, and this campaign is no exception. The two chief candidates, Roosevelt and Willkie, are taking no part in it, but the smearing that is going on behind the scenes is perhaps a little worse than usual. . . . To prevent profiteering on the vast supplies of food that will be necessary for the enlarged army and navy, defense commission experts are making a survey of all food stocks in the country, while discussing plans with agriculture department officials for the purchase of farm surpluses. . . . Representatives Usher Burdick and William Lemke of North Dakota fought shoulder-to-shoulder in previous elections, but in this one they are foes. Lemke, running as an independent for the senate, has two candidates in the field against Burdick. . . . Lies Committee member Joe Starnes of Alabama has come to the defense of Representative John Coffee of Washington, who is being accused by his Republican opponent of opposing the Dies investigation. Starnes sent Coffee a letter commending his support of the committee.

ADDRESSED TO PROGRESSIVES

Editor, Post-Crescent: I am writing to you as one Progressive to another and as one who has for many years been loyal to the Progressive Cause. I helped build the Progressive Party in Wisconsin, contributing insofar as I was able my time and money. I had the confidence of "Old Bob" LaFollette as one of his trusted lieutenants, and I believe I have the respect of the present generation of LaFollettes.

Having given so much for the up-building of the cause, it is only natural that I should be greatly concerned when I see False Prophets in Washington by political chicanery try to absorb the Progressive Party into the New Deal.

My work as legislative agent for the organizations listed on this letterhead (Mississippi River Flood Control Ass'n and Nat'l Conference on Water Problems) keeps me almost continuously in Washington during the sessions of the congress and has for the past 18 years, and I have ample opportunity to view at first hand the operations of the New Deal.

I voted for this New Deal in 1932 thinking I was voting for Progressives, and I was greatly shocked to soon discover that the political philosophy of the New Deal was not based on the "Equalization of Opportunity" as was the Progressive Philosophy, but on the Destruction of the Equalization of Opportunity, by the Centralization of Power in Washington, and later by the transfer to one man, the present Third Term candidate, of the rights of the people as vested by them in their representatives in the congress.

In no country other than in the Nazi, the Communist and the Fascist has such power been granted to the chief executive. It is well known that the abuse of power is but human and no man ever lived who can be trusted with the power which has been granted in many cases unlawfully to the Third Term candidate.

The liberties of the people are endangered. Representative government even now is hardly more than a name. The democracy, for which the young men of this land are being drafted into the ranks to defend, may not be here to defend after the election in November.

Stand fast you Progressives who marched to victory under the banner of "Old Bob," and you later ones who have taken up the torch; rebuke the Third Term candidate at the November election by voting for true Progressives, Willkie and McNamara, so that, in the words of the immortal Lincoln, a "government of the people, by the people, and for the people shall not perish from the earth."

44 CCC Camps to Operate in State

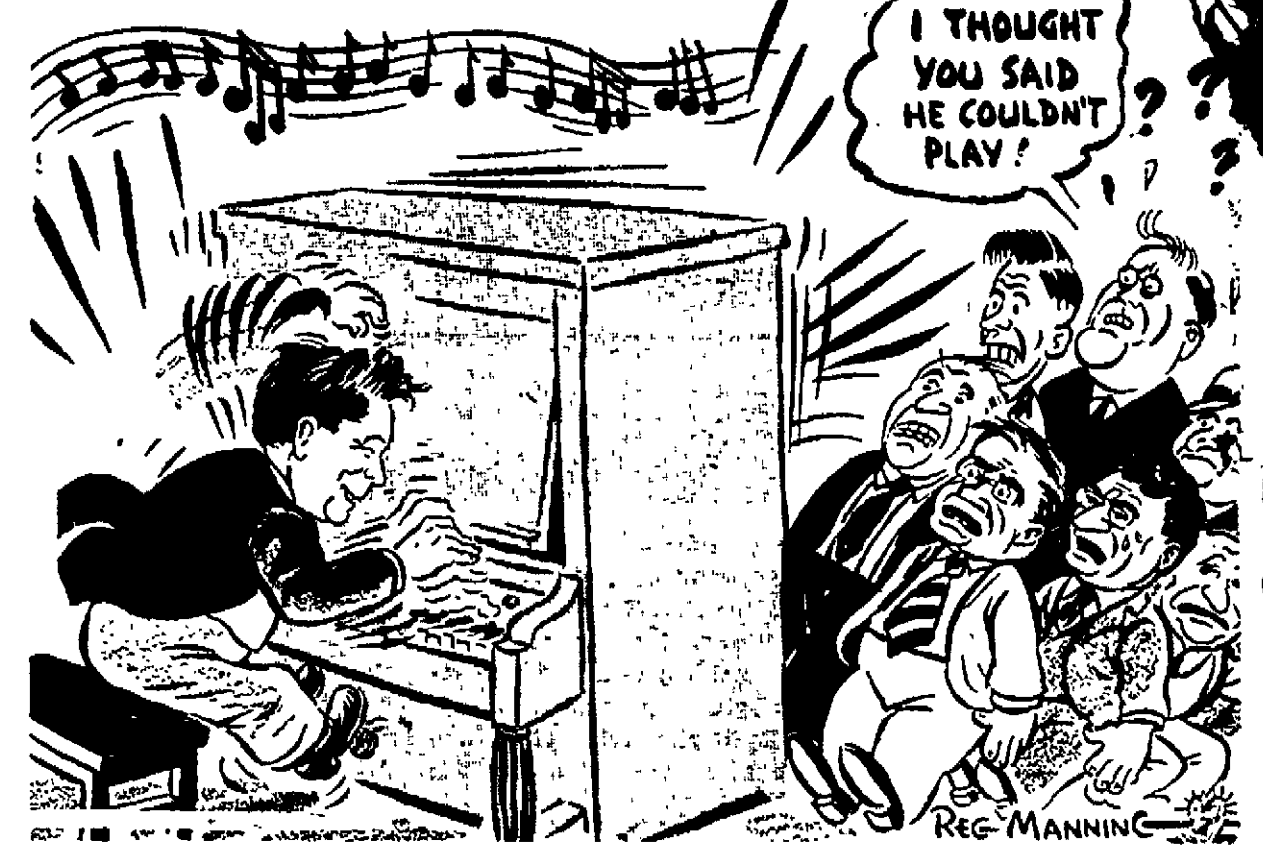

Post-Crescent Washington Bureau
Washington—James J. McEntee, director of the civilian conservation corps has announced that 44 CCC camps are scheduled for operation in Wisconsin from October until March 31 of next year.

The program provides for the employment of approximately 8,800 CCC enrollees on conservation work projects in Wisconsin during the next six months," McEntee said. "Approximately 200 enrollees will be assigned to each of the 44 camps. Of the 8,800 enrollees assigned to camps in the state, 2,400 will work on improvement, protection and development of national forests, 2,400 on state forest lands, 2,600 on soil erosion control projects on agricultural lands, 200 on the Necedah migratory waterfowl refuge, 400 in county park areas and 800 on state parks."

A total of 1,500 CCC barrack camps continue in operation, with an enrollment of 300,000 young men and war veterans. An additional 11,000 Indian and territorial enrollees will work on conservation projects on Indian reservations, and in Alaska, Hawaii, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

BUT HE CHANGED THEIR TUNE—

They Laughed as He Sat Down at the Piano

Under the Capitol Dome

BY JOHN WYNGAARD

Madison—University of Wisconsin authorities are indulging in wishful thinking if they believe that it will be any easier to convince the Heil administration in 1941 of the need for a huge capital outlay at the state school than it was in 1939.

The best judgment of capital observers is that the university picked the least propitious time to ask for $1,500,000 for new buildings and improvements. If the Republicans are elected again next week and control the state government for another two years, their primary objective will be to avoid new tax levies. That will be hard enough to accomplish with state expenditures at their present level. It will be practically impossible if the university demands and gets an extra million and a half for improvements, for the university's example will promptly be followed by other state institutions, many of which have claims as valid, and as old, as the university.

THE CLAIM
The unpromising reception in store for the request, however, ought not to cloud an honest appraisal of the facts behind the university building budget request.

It is true that the university's physical plant has worn greatly during recent years, that it has not been improved and enlarged in proportion to enrollment increases. Classroom crowding has been notorious. Wisconsin is probably the only major university in the country which does not have its own library building. Even the library furnished by the state historical society has been too small for years, as any member of a recent university generation can testify.

But Representative Heil administration spokesmen, in their private statements, uniformly point out that any proposal for increased state spending at a time when federal expenditures for defense are skyrocketing will be extremely hazardous. Bluntly they predict that it will be useless for the university to ask for extra building funds next year.

The state school has made some extensive and expensive improvements in recent years through a scheme which did not involve a strain upon the state treasury or the taxpayers' pockets. In that way the new university theater, dormitories, and the field house were built, all highly expensive projects. The means employed was the university building corporation, a quasi-public agency which borrowed from state trust funds and amortized the loan by receipts which the improvements made possible. The present program proposed, however, includes non-revenue producing buildings. If they are granted, they will be paid for directly out of the state treasury.

RECOLLECTING
It is a favorite stunt of Progressives nowadays to make sport bitterly of the Republican "campaign fund barrel," asserting that the opposition's battle is made particularly difficult because of the piteous funds available to Republican candidates. The cry is especially plaintive this year because the Republicans' war chest appears so mountainous in comparison with the Progressives' puny resources.

Those Progressives with good memories, however, can recollect the day when Progressives welcomed with open arms their particular kind of financial "angels," when there were no objections to rich men in politics—as long as it was Progressive politics. There was "like" Stephenson of Marinette, for example, who made millions in lumber and doled much of it out with a prodigal hand to the budding Pro-

Personal Health Talks

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.
Noted Physician and Author

PILES, PEPTIC ULCER

Medical literature is replete with material on the subject of peptic (gastric, stomach or duodenal) ulcer, mainly dealing with the diagnosis and treatment. There is comparatively little that deals with the causation of peptic ulcer. That is natural enough, for no one knows definitely what causes peptic ulcer.

In line with the theory favored by many physicians who have studied the problem, ulcer is a reflex irritation, which is not to be confused with focal infection, is the observation made by Dr. T. F. McNamara, Rochester, N. Y. (whose handbook on Injection Treatment of Hemorrhoids should be in every doctor's library), that the obliteration of internal hemorrhoids in a single painless office treatment (as a rule) has brought about immediate relief of the ulcer symptoms and thereafter steady improvement in general health and prolonged freedom from all digestive difficulty. In several such cases Dr. McNamara had positive X-ray evidence to corroborate the diagnosis of gastric or duodenal ulcer.

Somehow I associate the name of Thos. F. McNamara with that of James Mackenzie. Dr. Mackenzie served for many years as a country doctor and eventually attained the eminence of specialization—his textbook on Diseases of the Heart crowned his career in medicine. Dr. McNamara has carried on general practice for many years too and through the same painstaking study and observation as that which characterized the professional life of Mackenzie he has eminently prepared himself to serve as a real specialist and as a teacher.

Whether reflex irritation from neglected internal hemorrhoids or progressive party when it needed it most. It has been said that Stephen-son, who was made a U. S. senator by LaFollette Sr., spent half a million dollars for the development of the LaFollette movement in its swaddling clothes days, and some historians recount that the Progressive party would not have survived to 1910 were it not for the lumber baron's ample purse and generous nature.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS
Chronic Running Ear
Please write an article about chronic running ear. Have had a discharge from the left ear since childhood. (D. R.)

Answer—It requires treatment by the physician. Better avoid wet cotton or other ear plug. Ventilation of ear is better. Drop in ear three times daily a drop of solution of ten grains of acid in one ounce of grain alcohol.

Never Mind Your Pores
Health lecturer declared that beauty treatments women take nowadays are increasing the prevalence of consumption, because the treatments close the pores and so free circulation and bring on the consumption. (E. R.)

Answer—The "pores" so-called, have nothing to do with circulation or breathing or absorption, and the only harm to health from beauty treatments (aside from irritation or harm by chemicals or poisons applied to the skin) is indirect—that is, the false beauty may encourage the girl or woman to neglect the hygienic factors of real beauty and so lead to gradual loss of health. See use of cosmetics and recipes for preparing good ones at home are given in booklet "Save Your Skin"—for copy send twenty-five cent coin and I cent stamped envelope bearing your address.

Iodin Ration
I would like to have your instructions for taking an iodine diet. From what you say about it I think I need more iodine too. (Mrs. D. H.)

Answer—Send stamped envelope bearing your address and ask for "Instructions for Taking an Iodin Ration."

Willkie and the Wisconsin Progressives

The letter in the Forum tonight states the position of many, and probably a majority, of the Wisconsin Progressives.

If Senator LaFollette were not running for reelection and considered it good political strategy to give a quiet mulling lip service to the Third Term it is inconceivable that the intelligent and horny-handed Progressives who have generally been clean-minded and practical, should support the first piece of royalty in America since 1776.

Never did Wisconsin Progressive leaders swallow such a bitter, vomit dose of concentrated castor oil. But in their behalf it must be said that having bent the head in token of fealty to the Third Term they have dismissed the subject from their discussions, probably because they never had a more distasteful one.

The President has used all the power, the wealth and the showmanship of his great office to attach Senator LaFollette to his gilded chariot. He has entertained him on those wondrous trips while the moon was shining upon the waters and failed to be mollified? Flattery and publicity, both alike dear to the politician's heart, have been poured out by the Third Term to try to hold men like LaFollette and Hiram Johnson. But when the syrup didn't stick the venom was substituted.

The declaration of Philip LaFollette when he launched the national Progressive party, although it did not mention the Third Term or the New Deal, literally tore to shreds the wastage and the wanton looterism of the Roosevelt policies, and did so in about the same language one might expect from Mr. Willkie.

It is a good sign of honest men and independent thinkers, and proof of a vigorous heritage, to see Progressive leaders in this state move over to the Willkie side. But it is even better to observe how clearly they understand that the Roosevelt policies are not progressive and although delightfully baptized "liberal" by their parent they are as reactionary as anything ever written alongside the deepest gold vault on Wall Street.

The Poles and "My Ambassador"

Both Mr. Willkie and Mr. Roosevelt have remained calm as the sprint down the home stretch comes in view.

But many other candidates and their active supporters have not.

It is unfair to blame men who are in the spotlight for losing their heads under the terrific stress of a campaign but it would be even more unwise to neglect noting the fact.

Personal abuse, wild and unsupported charges, violent losses of temper, physical attacks and extreme and unreasonable promises are all symptoms of physical, nervous or mental instability. But they may also be mere indications of anger and resentment at the realization that defeat is at the elbow.

Many administration big-wigs are acting like kittens nursed on raw meat. The Little Flower, usually serene, now judders like a wild man and physically assaults hecklers asking decent questions. Boss Flynn, ordinarily cool, now goes from a fiery rage into a blue funk and scratches his toes when his ears tickle. And gay Tommy the Cork the Power behind the Throne, has tossed his bantering manner aside as he grins his teeth with this sort of Willkie denunciation:

"Fighting with a business man is like fighting with a Polack. You can give no quarter."

Of course Corcoran would not wantonly insult the Poles. Neither would Mr. Roosevelt purposely call attention to his autocratic power by referring to Mr. Kennedy as "my ambassador to England," as he did Wednesday night. If the campaign keeps on he may be calling the rest of us "my subjects."

These are just indications that the Praetorian army and its leader are in full retreat, angry, anxious and desperate.

The European Mentality

The suggestions of Mussolini's newspaper that we may profit by sharing the British empire if we will merely stand idly by and permit the Axis to destroy it is cynical beyond words but, if it does not express the views of all Europeans, it certainly states correctly the attitude that has prevailed in many spots on that unhappy continent for long. Italian journalists could never appreciate that their proposal would be looked upon in this country as base beyond measure. German rulers, in 1914, were non-plussed when we did not invade Canada. What an opportunity was lost, they thought.

The existence of this sort of reasoning, and the failure to comprehend it in America, have jointly created a condition dangerous to ourselves when we enter into diplomatic deals with Europe. Our experience heretofore has been very costly to us. But to view our government blithely undisturbed as it proceeds in much the same manner it did 23 years ago is to see a disinclination to learn from the most expensive and pointed experience in our history.

A Warship of 1776

There has been brought up from the bottom of Lake Champlain one of the colonialists' war vessels that was sunk in 1776 by British gunfire. This ship, but three months old when it plunged to the bottom, was called the Philadelphia. At the time her fate overcame her she was under command of General Benedict Arnold who was still a patriot. Built of green oak her massive timbers seem little affected by the generations that have passed.

Up forward there was a 12-pound cannon that was loaded when she went down while on her port and starboard sides she was equipped with 9-pounders. British cannon had made holes clean through her and one big cannon ball was found securely lodged in her side. One of her masts was still upright, the brick fireplace amidships at which the meals for her men were prepared was intact and her deck and holds were littered with cooking utensils, muskets and other relics.

But this rather important war vessel of the inland seas was only 54 feet in length with a 15-foot beam. Her first and final battle was fought but four miles from Plattsburg. The British fleet consisted of 28 ships. On the face of things it seemed like a British victory since of the 14 American vessels engaged 10 were sunk. But the Yankees were not downhearted. They claimed victory out of this apparent defeat. And they argued it long and stubbornly. Although their fleet was destroyed they pointed to the fact that they had so fearfully damaged the English fleet that it never again throughout that long war was able to operate with any effectiveness.

So though they were whipped they found solace in their foe's wounds and their own stubborn denial of defeat.

"From the Smoke Into the Smother"

In the name of patriotism let every tongue remain silent at the boggle of drawing the draft numbers. Even to call attention to the fact that 6 numbers were omitted from the fish-bowl or receptacle may reach the stature of appeasement.

Let carping critics restrain their hot breath. If they knew the truth they might find that this was the best case of efficiency at Washington in 8 years.

Of course if the absent numbers had been included No. 158 might not have been drawn. The absent numbers might have come first. As a lottery you have a wash-out when someone keeps part of the numbers in his desk. But it could have been worse.

And perhaps it is a blessing in disguise. It will warn the young men entering service, that they mustn't expect too much. When the breeches are not available for the uniform, they will not grieve. When the commissary hasn't any meat they may say, "Who expected any?" And when they find 3-inch shells for 6-inch guns a sergeant may be ready with the quip, "Use two of them at a time, Buddy."

Our national blunderers are as sturdy and dependable as the oak—in blundering.

The Man Who Wrote the Declaration of Independence

Frequently Thomas Jefferson's warning to his countrymen against a Third Term have been printed. These are the warnings to be found in official state papers. But they are not all.

For Jefferson's second term expired under circumstances of world confusion much like those prevailing today. And men argued with him that an emergency existed and The Great Tradition should be set aside. To Henry Guest on the 4th of January, 1809 Thomas Jefferson replied like this:

"I am sensible of the kindness of your rebuke on my determination to retire from office at a time when our country is laboring under difficulties truly great. But if the principle of rotation be a sound one, as I conscientiously believe it to be with respect to this office, no pretext should ever be permitted to dispense with it, because there never will be a time when real difficulties will not exist, and furnish a plausible pretext for dispensation."

If we smash The Great Tradition why not complete the work and cut the Declaration of Independence into shreds and stamp the Bill of Rights underfoot?

The DAILY WASHINGTON MERRY GO ROUND

BY DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN
Washington—To analyze the Axis drive in the Mediterranean one must keep in mind the basic policy Hitler outlined to his general staff in the early days of the war.

He decreed that it was better to lose three million men in the first year of the war than four million men in four years of long drawn out suffering.

What he now sees is the unwelcome prospect of a long struggle in which the synthetically cooked up morale of the German people would be pitted against the dogged determination of the British. That is why he is so vigorously reshuffling the war map with the idea of shutting off Suez and Gibraltar, then cutting off the British Far Eastern trade route around Africa at Dakar.

He wants to make the odds so overwhelming, at least on paper, that the British will yield to a dictated peace. Unquestionably the odds against the Empire are serious, not only on paper but in fact.

Most U. S. military observers agree that Hitler can take both Suez and Gibraltar unless the Russians actively intervene, but it is doubtful, regardless of the odds, that Hitler can force his own peace on the British. Inside fact is that sub rosa peace feelers have been put out again and again for some time.

Usually they come from Swedish sources, sometimes are conveyed by prominent Frenchmen, but always are vague on an on-an-if, but-and-when basis. They are just persistent enough, however, to indicate that Hitler would like to make peace if he could pretty much dictate the terms. And those terms might well mean a free hand with the British fleet for Hitler to penetrate Latin America.

After all, the Nazi argument regarding this can be very convincing to the British. Why should England and Germany, the argument runs, destroy their factories and set back their trade for years, only to let the United States take advantage of the situation by extending itself in Latin America? Why not patch up a peace on the basis of the Far East for Britain and Latin America for Germany? There is plenty of room in the two areas for both and no reason why the United States should spread a flimsy Monroe Doctrine over an empty continent.

So runs the German argument, and it can be made very plausible to beleaguered and desperate British business. However, there is not much chance of it being accepted now. But should American aid to Britain diminish, then the British appeasement group might have its way.

CENSORING JOHN L.
During most of his life, John L. Lewis has refused to take censorship or dictation from anyone. But before delivering his famous radio broadcast for Wendell Willkie last week, he meekly bowed before the Republicans and permitted at least one extract in his speech to be deleted. He had submitted the draft two days in advance to Republican leaders, since they were paying about $45,000 for his radio time.

The censored portion of the speech referred to the pro-labor congressmen and senators who are up for re-election this year. Because these men have gone down the line for labor, the CIO has been giving them every possible help. Twenty-six of these congressmen are in coal mining districts, are strong for the United Mine Workers, but also are pro-Roosevelt.

Lewis had written a plea in his speech for labor to re-elect the friends of labor—referring to these men. However, since these 26 pro-labor congressmen are being opposed by Republicans, the GOP leaders objected. Lewis bowed to their censorship.

Note—John L. Lewis' offer to resign as head of the CIO if Roosevelt is re-elected was as empty as his offer to step down from the CIO if Bill Green would quit as head of the AFL. In either case, Lewis would remain head of the powerful United Mine Workers, a job which pays him $25,000 plus expenses reputed to be around $60,000.

Lewis is sure of re-election as head of the Miners, since the nominations closed in August, and he is the only candidate. Vice President Phil Murray was supported by 198 locals for the presidency, but refused to oppose Lewis.

WILLKIE AND COPPER
On the platform of The New York Herald-Tribune Forum, when Wendell Willkie made his attack on Roosevelt for knocking the pins from under 17-cent-a-pound copper, was Defense Commissioner Leon Henderson, price expert who was chiefly responsible for the price cut. The vital defense metal is now selling around 12 cents.

When Willkie concluded, Henderson turned and saw seated directly behind him the head of one of the leading brass companies, who the day before had sent Henderson a long telegram complaining about the price of copper. He had asked for a conference on the question of lifting the 4-cent tariff so he could buy 8-cent foreign copper.

Standing out on the business executive's lapel was a big Willkie button. Eying it, Henderson observed with a mischievous grin:

"Well, fancy meeting you here! I really would have enjoyed this speech if I'd known you were in back of me. What did you think of your candidate's views on the price of copper?"

"I'll tell you when I see you in Washington," was the dour reply.

MERRY-GO-ROUND

Now is the period of an election campaign when both sides let loose the below-the-belt stuff, and this campaign is no exception. The two chief candidates, Roosevelt and Willkie, are taking no part in it, but the smearing that is going on behind the scenes is perhaps a little worse than usual. . . . To prevent profiteering on the vast supplies of food that will be necessary for the enlarged army and navy, defense commission experts are making a survey of all food stocks in the country, while discussing plans with agriculture department officials for the purchase of farm surpluses. . . . Representatives Usher Burdick and William Lemke of North Dakota fought shoulder-to-shoulder in previous elections, but in this one they are foes. Lemke, running as an independent for the senate, has two candidates in the field against Burdick. . . . Dies Committee man Joe Starnes of Alabama has come to the defense of Representative John Coffee of Washington, who is being accused by his Republican opponent of opposing the Dies investigation. Starnes sent Coffee a letter commending his support of the committee.

I helped build the Progressive Party in Wisconsin, contributing insofar as I was able my time and money. I had the confidence of "Old Bob" LaFollette as one of his trusted lieutenants, and I believe I have the respect of the present generation of LaFollettes.

Having given so much for the up-building of the cause, it is only natural that I should be greatly concerned when I see False Prophets in Washington by political chicanery try to absorb the Progressive Party into the New Deal.

My work as legislative agent for the organizations listed on this letterhead (Mississippi River Flood Control Ass'n and Nat'l Conference on Water Problems) keeps me almost continuously in Washington during the sessions of the congress and has for the past 18 years, and I have ample opportunity to view at first hand the operations of the New Deal.

I voted for this New Deal in 1932 thinking I was voting for Progressives, and I was greatly shocked to soon discover that the political philosophy of the New Deal was not based on the "Equalization of Opportunity" as was the Progressive Philosophy, but on the destruction of the Equalization of Opportunity, by the Centralization of Power in Washington, and later by the transfer to one man, the present Third Term candidate, of the rights of the people as vested by them in their representatives in the congress.

In no country other than in the Nazi, the Communist and the Fascist has such power been granted to the chief executive. It is well known that the abuse of power is but human and no man ever lived who can be trusted with the power which has been granted in many cases unlawfully to the Third Term candidate.

The liberties of the people are endangered. Representative government even now is hardly more than a name. The democracy, for which the young men of this land are being drafted into the ranks to defend, may not be here to defend after the election in November.

Stand fast you Progressives who marched to victory under the banner of "Old Bob" and you later ones who have taken up the torch; rebuke the Third Term candidate at the November election by voting for true Progressives, Willkie and McNary, so that, in the words of the immortal Lincoln, a "government of the people, by the people, and for the people shall not perish from the earth."

25 YEARS AGO

Friday, Nov. 5, 1915
William J. Bryan that day took complete issue with President Wilson on the latter's defense program announced at the Manhattan club the previous night.

Max P. Krausich of Appleton the previous week obtained a patent on a sewing machine attachment.

Appleton hunters returning from Poygan reported thousands of ducks on the famous feeding grounds.

Miss Catherine Koehn, 747 Richmond street, entertained the Golden Hour club at her home the previous evening.

10 YEARS AGO

Friday, Oct. 31, 1930
Donald Breitrich, town of Ellington, was reelected president of the Outagamie County Town, City and Village Clerks association at the annual meeting Thursday. Others named were Carl Becker, Appleton, vice president; John E. Hantschel, Appleton, secretary.

Mrs. Charles Hueseman and Mrs. Walter Koerner were the readers at the meeting of the Women's Missionary Reading circle of First English Lutheran church Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Gust Radtke, 826 N. Fair street.

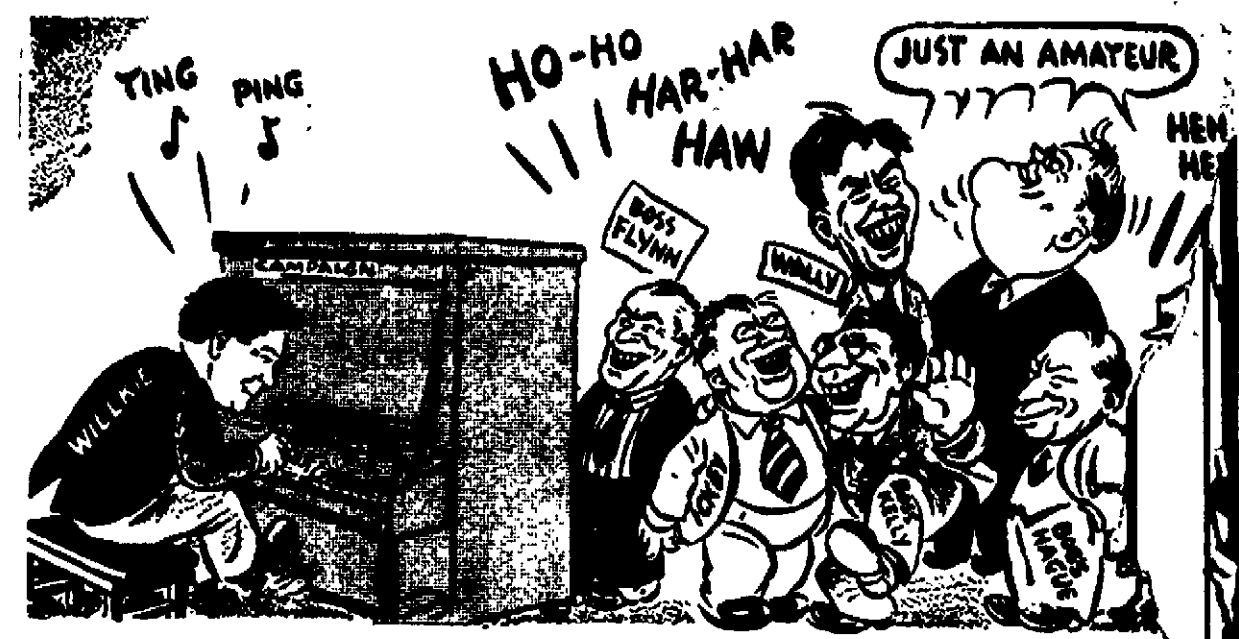

Plans had been completed for the annual ball of the Appleton Yacht club at Terrace Gardens Nov. 11, according to Leo Schroeder, general chairman.

44 CCC Camps to Operate in State

Post-Crescent Washington Bureau
Washington—James J. McEntee, director of the civilian conservation corps has announced that 44 CCC camps are scheduled for operation in Wisconsin from October until March 31 of next year.

"The program provides for the employment of approximately 8,800 CCC enrollees on conservation work projects in Wisconsin during the next six months," McEntee said. "Approximately 200 enrollees will be assigned to each of the 44 camps. Of the 8,800 enrollees assigned to camps in the state, 2,400 will work on improvement, protection and development of national forests, 2,400 on state forest lands, 2,600 on soil erosion control projects on agricultural lands, 200 on the Necedah migratory waterfowl refuge, 400 in county park areas and 800 on state parks."

A total of 1,500 CCC barracks camps continue in operation, with an enrollment of 300,000 young men and war veterans. An additional 11,000 Indian and territorial enrollees will work on conservation projects on Indian reservations, and in Alaska, Hawaii, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

They Laughed as He Sat Down at the Piano

Under the CAPTOL DOME

BY JOHN WYNGAARD

Madison—University of Wisconsin authorities are indulging in wishful thinking if they believe that it will be any easier to convince the Heil administration in 1941 of the need for a huge capital outlay at the state school than it was in 1939.

The best judgment of Capitol observers is that the university picked the least propitious time to ask for $1,500,000 for new buildings and improvements. If the Republicans are elected again next week and control the state government for another two years, their primary objective will be to avoid new tax levies. That will be hard enough to accomplish with state expenditures at their present level. It will be practically impossible if the university demands and gets an extra million and a half for improvements, for the university's example will promptly be followed by other state institutions, many of which have claims as valid, and as old, as the university.

THE CLAIM
The unpromising reception in store for the request, however, ought not to cloud an honest appraisal of the facts behind the university building budget request.

It is true that the university's physical plant has worn greatly during recent years, that it has not been improved and enlarged in proportion to enrolment increases. Classroom crowding has been notorious. Wisconsin is probably the only major university in the country which does not have its own library building. Even the library furnished by the state historical society has been too small for years, as any member of a recent university generation can testify.

But Representative Heil administration spokesmen, in their private statements, uniformly point out that any proposal for increased state spending at a time when federal expenditures for defense are skyrocketing will be extremely hazardous. Bluntly they predict that it will be useless for the university to ask for extra building funds next year.

The state school has made some extensive and expensive improvements in recent years through a scheme which did not involve a strain upon the state treasury or the taxpayers' pockets. In that way the new university theater, dormitories, and the field house were built, all highly expensive projects. The means employed was the university building corporation, a quasi-public agency which borrowed from state trust funds and amortized the loan by receipts which the improvements made possible. The present program proposed, however, includes non-revenue producing buildings. If they are granted, they will be paid for directly out of the state treasury.

RECOLLECTING
It is a favorite stunt of Progressives nowadays to make sport bitterly of the Republican "campaign fund barrel," asserting that the opposition's battle is made particularly difficult because of the plentiful funds available to Republican candidates. The cry is especially plaintive this year because the Republicans' war chest appears so mountainous in comparison with the Progressives' puny resources.

Those Progressives with good memories, however, can recollect the day when Progressives welcomed with open arms their particular kind of financial "angels" when there were no objections to rich men in politics—as long as it was Progressive politics. There was "Ike" Stephenson of Marinette, for example, who made millions in lumber and doled much of it out with a prodigal hand to the budding Pro-

Personal Health Talks

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.
Noted Physician and Author

PILES, PEPTIC ULCER

Medical literature is replete with material on the subject of peptic (gastric, stomach or duodenal) ulcer, mainly dealing with the diagnosis and treatment. There is comparatively little that deals with the causation of peptic ulcer. This is natural enough, for no one knows definitely what causes peptic ulcer.

In line with the theory favored by many physicians who have studied the problem, that a contributing factor of peptic ulcer is reflex irritation, which is not to be confused with focal infection, is the observation made by Dr. T. F. McNamara, Rochester, N. Y., (whose handbook on Injection Treatment of Hemorrhoids should be in every doctor's library), that the obliteration of internal hemorrhoids in a single painless office treatment (as a rule) has brought about immediate relief of the ulcer symptoms and thereafter steady improvement in general health and prolonged freedom from all digestive difficulty. In several such cases Dr. McNamara had positive X-ray evidence to corroborate the diagnosis of gastric or duodenal ulcer.

Somewhat I associate the name of Thos. F. McNamara with that of James Mackenzie, Dr. Mackenzie served for many years as a country doctor and eventually attained the eminence of specialization—his textbook on Diseases of the Heart crowned his career in medicine. Dr. McNamara has carried on general practice for many years too and through the same painstaking study and observation as that which characterized the professional life of McKenzie he has eminently prepared himself to serve as a real specialist and as a teacher.

Whether reflex irritation from neglected internal hemorrhoids or grossive party when it needed it most. It has been said that Stephenson, who was made a U. S. senator by LaFollette Sr., spent half a million dollars for the development of the LaFollette movement in its swaddling clothes days, and some historians recount that the Progressive party would not have survived to 1910 were it not for the lumber baron's ample purse and generous nature.

The physician Better avoid wet cotton or other ear plug. Ventilation of ear is better. Drop in ear three times daily a drop of solution of ten grains of acid in one ounce of grain alcohol.

NEVER MIND YOUR PORES
Health lecturer declared that beauty treatments women take nowadays are increasing the prevalence of consumption, because the treatments close the pores and so stop free circulation and bring on consumption. (E. R.)

ANSWER—The "pores," so-called, have nothing to do with circulation or breathing or absorption, and the only harm to health from beauty treatments (aside from irritation or harm by chemicals or poisons applied to the skin) is indirect—that is, the fake beauty may encourage the girl or woman to neglect the hygienic factors of real beauty and so lead to gradual loss of health. Same use of cosmetics and recipes for preparing good ones at home are given in booklet "Save Your Skin"—for copy send twenty-five cents coin and 1 cent stamped envelope bearing your address.

Circle Will Aid Bundles For Britain

Members of the Infant Welfare circle of Appleton King's Daughters, already busy with their local milk fund project and Red Cross work, have begun additional charitable work as a branch of Bundles for Britain. The organization furnishes clothing, money and knitted garments to the fighting forces of Britain and other families.

The Appleton branch receives all instructions for its work from the New York headquarters. Anyone wishing to do work for the organization may call Mrs. Guy McCoslin, who will give out definite information regarding the knitting. Clothing donated must be clean and in good repair. Mrs. Ray Peterson is chairman of the receiving committee and will take such donations at her home.

Mrs. James Bergstrom, chairman of the finance committee, will take donations of money. Her committee points out that one cent buys a gumme tablet; $1 a 50-yard gauze bandage, $5, wool for socks, mittens, scarf, helmet, sweater and wristlets for one man; $50, blood transfusion apparatus; $150, a portable surgical kit; $500, a portable X-ray machine; $5,000, X-ray for a base hospital; and $50,000, equipment for a base hospital.

Persons interested in any phase of the work can get information from Mrs. Potter Park or any of the other chairmen named.

The King's Daughters also have undertaken to make a large quota of Red Cross layettes. Many knitted garments also are being made.

To raise money for its milk fund, which is used locally for needy families, the organization will sponsor its annual charity ball Dec. 21 at North Shore Golf club.

No Effort to Reduce Costs, Willkie Says

I see in this crowd is literally saturated with taxes. More than that, when the cost of those things are increased, it has a depressing influence on business." The nominee contended that governmental fiscal policies also affected "serious gains" of labor. It does no good to have collective bargaining, he asserted, if a man does not have a job to bargain about. From continued deficit financing, he said, "inevitably come inflation, bankruptcy and chaos out of the ashes of those things come dictators." The only solution Willkie declared, "is to elect an administration which can stimulate business and provide jobs and raise the national income."

At New Brunswick, Police Lieutenant W. J. Savage estimated the crowd at more than 10,000. Before he was introduced, the nominee smiled and waved his hand to the time of his campaign song, "We Want Willkie in the White House," played by a band beneath him. Sees GOP Gains

Willkie said he had heard from "responsible people" this morning that he would carry Missouri and that "the swing in Kentucky is coming more rapidly every hour."

"I feel very confident we are going to carry West Virginia," he added. "There is no question about what is going to happen in this state (New Jersey) despite Frank Hague."

Earlier, Willkie asserted that President Roosevelt's foreign policies "are leading us straight to a year for which we are totally unready," and added that his domestic policies "are leading to complete collapse."

The Republican presidential nominee issued a statement continuing his criticism of the chief executive's Boston address as he approached the end of an 18,000 mile campaign tour.

He announced he would discuss the speech further in a radio broadcast at 7.30 tonight (central standard time) over the NBC (Red) network. Special attention will be placed on aviation angles.

Cites British Order Willkie's statement, made public from his special train which will be broken up tomorrow noon, took up primarily Mr. Roosevelt's disclosure at Boston Wednesday of what the Republican candidate termed "certain orders which the British government has placed with our manufacturers."

"And the tragic fact," he said, "is that, owing to the policy of neglect and delay over the past seven years, they must remain on order for many, many months to come."

The Republican candidate argued that the president "by inference and innuendo" tried to take credit for the plane orders to manufacturers who he declared had been neglected and "even abused" by the New Deal.

(In Boston Mr. Roosevelt disclosed he had asked the defense priorities board to give "most sympathetic consideration" to a British request to order 12,000 more planes from American manufacturers.) "I was surprised by the use, in such a superficial manner," Willkie said, "of an effort so vital to Britain and our own safety. I cannot understand the propriety of speaking in a political speech, as if from the White House, of making campaign material of the duties of the president of the United States."

Declaring that he had entered the campaign determined "insofar as I could, to present a solid American front the world in this dangerous hour," Willkie continued:

"Accordingly, I went the limit in supporting certain elements of the third-term candidate's position in foreign affairs. This attitude of mine has been called, by the third-term candidate, 'political sterility' and 'me-too' stuff."

"I was willing to forego use of some of the most telling points against Mr. Roosevelt's rashness in foreign affairs. But my opposition was not willing to let it rest at that."

Formation of a junior drum corps to supplement the present unit, with younger boys "graduating" into the older group, has been approved by the SAL committee.

land, instead of going to his Hyde Park, N. Y., home, because it seemed wise to keep in pretty close touch.

Originally he had planned to go directly from his Saturday night speaking engagement in the Cleveland auditorium to Hyde Park, where he plans his final radio broadcast of the campaign Monday night, election eve.

The president opened his press conference by telling reporters that he probably would stay in Washington until Sunday midnight or Monday.

Asked whether there was any particular reason for this change, Mr. Roosevelt replied no—except that things are coming in all the time and it seems pretty wise to keep in pretty close touch.

The 1940 Democratic nominee leaves late today for a quick sweep through New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio.

Joking with reporters, the president said that he could say no more about the topic of his speech at the Brooklyn Academy of Music tonight than that it was No. 4.

(The nominee apparently referred to the fact that he had spoken previously in Philadelphia Oct. 23; Madison Square Garden, New York, Oct. 28 and Boston Oct. 30.)

Sticks to Prediction When asked whether recent events had caused him to modify the election prediction he had placed in a sealed envelope some weeks ago, Mr. Roosevelt replied that the guess was just about the same. He added quickly that he had looked into the envelope the other day and had remarked that there was no change.

At another point, the chief executive was asked to comment on remarks by his political opponents directed to Mr. Roosevelt's recent reference to Joseph P. Kennedy (ambassador to Great Britain) as "my ambassador."

(Wendell L. Willkie said in a statement Thursday that he had "assumed" that Kennedy "was the ambassador of the people of the United States and not the personal representative of the president," adding: "I, at least, would consider all government representatives to be servants of the people rather than of myself.")

The president replied that he didn't think he'd better take up a political thing in a press conference. It's a purely political thing, he added, asserting that some of you here in Washington know the difference between an ambassador and a minister.

If you don't the president said, you should check up at the state department.

tion, the patrolman responded: "I am going to vote for Mr. Roosevelt regardless of what his secretary might have done."

Washington — (7) — A message of apology went today to a New York Negro policeman from Stephen Early, White House secretary, for what ever part Early may have had in an altercation which the policeman said resulted in his injury.

The incident, which Early called "regrettable" in a formal statement last night, occurred in New York's Pennsylvania station Monday night when a party of White House officials and newspapermen were attempting to board the presidential special train for Washington.

"I do not believe that I did anything wrong in this incident," Early said in making the apology. "I did not attack or kick any officer."

The policeman, James Sloan, 42, said the next day that he had suffered abdominal injury from a kick by a member of the presidential party. Later Early told his press conference that in a jostling scuffle he "gave the knee" to one of a group of officers who shoved him after refusing to examine his credentials, so he could board the train.

Early's statement last night, which charged that "in certain Republican quarters political importance is being attached to an unfortunate altercation," did not mention Sloan by name.

It said, however, that he wished to apologize to the officer who "believes I was responsible for hurting him" and to Police Commissioner Lewis J. Valentine "for having had any part in this regrettable affair."

Propose Traffic Measures To Lighten Load on John St.

Traffic measures to cut traffic hazards near Lawrence college buildings on John street will be recommended by the traffic committee at a city council meeting Wednesday night, Nov. 6, according to Alderman Reno Doerfler.

The committee proposes making Meade street an arterial highway from John street to College avenue; widening of the radius of the street on the northeast corner of Meade and John streets; a sign on the north side of John street directing through traffic westbound on John street north on Meade street; a stop sign at the southeast corner of Lawe street and Alton street; and a sign at the intersection of Lawe street and Alton street prohibiting heavy traffic on John street west of Meade street.

The measures are intended to discourage heavy and frequent traffic on John street near Russell Sage dormitory and the new fraternity quadrangle, Alderman Doerfler said.

The committee also will recommend that Rankin street be made an arterial highway from College avenue to Wisconsin avenue and that North street be widened and improved from Pacific street to the city limits.

To keep a closer check on taxi companies, the committee will recommend that cab companies report weekly the number of cabs in operation, their license numbers and their insurance policies. Also that cabs be numbered with the firm's name in 4-inch letters before they are put in operation. This is to prevent the use of non-licensed cars during rush periods, Alderman Doerfler said.

Spooks Aren't Only Trouble Makers on A Halloween Night

Chicago — (7) — Leslie Voight isn't so sure that all Halloween spooks are just pumpkin faces and bed sheets because he was haunted last night with bad luck.

A truck driver employed by the W. R. Arthur Transfer Co. Janesville, Wis., Voight was unloading four new autos in front of a garage in suburban Oak Park last night when it all started.

He told police that he had two of the cars unloaded, and was working on a third when two men got into one of the autos on the street and drove off. Knowing the machine contained only one gallon of gasoline, Voight said he jumped into another new auto and started in pursuit.

A few blocks away, however, his car and another driven by Mrs. Betty Dade, 30, collided. Both autos were damaged and Mrs. McDade charged Voight with reckless driving. He was released on $100 bond.

Meanwhile, the two men in the stolen car escaped. A filling station attendant reported that he had placed 10 gallons of gasoline in a new auto whose occupants drove away without paying for it.

Kubitz Is New County Public Welfare Head

State Department to Compile Survey of Juvenile Delinquency

The appointment of R. H. Kubitz, 1602 N. Morrison street, as director of the Outagamie county public welfare department was announced today by officials of the state department. Kubitz was formerly fourth ward alderman.

Mrs. Helen Donahue, acting director, has resigned and will resume her duties as a case worker.

Coupled with the announcement of the appointment of Kubitz was a statement from Frank C. Klode, director of the state department, that a juvenile delinquency survey will be made in Outagamie county.

Surveys of this type in which exact figures have been compiled for the first time have been completed in 37 counties in Wisconsin.

According to Klode, the purpose of the survey in Outagamie county is to discover the nature, extent, and scope of the problem of juvenile delinquency, including a study of the present methods of treatment, resources for treatment and prevention, and certain factors contributing to community delinquency.

Ed T. Sullivan and Mrs. Myrtle McIver, Green Bay, state probation and parole officers, assisted by Kubitz, will conduct the survey in this county. The investigation will extend over about a week.

The welfare investigators will work with courts, social agencies, probation and parole officers, schools, police departments, health officials, and city and county administrative officials during the survey.

Gather Data

The survey will gather together data on the number of juvenile delinquents, their home conditions and court records, the methods of handling them in Outagamie county, the community resources for treatment and prevention and "community delinquency."

Quoting from the Wisconsin statistics, Klode gave the following definition of a juvenile delinquent: "The 'delinquent child' shall mean any child under the age of 18 years who has violated any law of the state or any county, city, town or village ordinance; or who by reason of being wayward or habitually disobedient is uncontrolled by his parent, guardian, or custodian; or who habitually so deports himself as to injure or endanger the morals or health of himself or others."

"Dr. George Douglas, assistant professor of sociology at Lawrence college, who has made a study of juvenile delinquency in Appleton, will be consulted."

"Directing the state-wide program is Dr. Morris Caldwell, director of the division of correction, and Professor Lloyd V. Ballard, Beloit college, a member of the state board of public welfare."

Ask Permit to Divert Water

States to Make Tests While Lakes Flow Into Illinois Waterway

Chicago —(P)— Permission to increase diversion of Lake Michigan waters into the Illinois waterway for a 10-day experimental period was sought today by the seven Great Lakes states in a petition to the United States supreme court.

Attorney General John E. Casady of Illinois announced that the petition had been mailed to Monte M. Lemann of New Orleans, special master appointed by the court to conduct hearings on Illinois' plea for increased flowage.

The six states opposing the plea—Wisconsin, Minnesota, Michigan, Ohio, Pennsylvania and New York—joined Illinois in asking the supreme court for an order boosting the flowage temporarily from 1,500 cubic feet per second to 10,000.

Diversion litigation has continued for nearly two decades. Illinois contends that more water is needed to care for Chicago sewage dumped into the waterway; that the present rate of diversion has created unsanitary conditions along the waterway.

The opposing states contend that no health menace exists by virtue of the current flowage, and that increased diversion would damage lakeshore property and adversely affect shipping.

If the supreme court approves the joint petition, the effect of the increased diversion would be measured by 70 tests daily, conducted by engineers selected by Illinois, Wisconsin and one of the other states.

Hearings conducted recently by Lemann concerned Illinois' request for a diversion of 5,000 cubic feet per second until 1942 when it is expected that Chicago sewage treatment plants would be completed. Sanitary plants will eliminate the necessity for increased flowage.

Historic Campaign Reaches Intensive 'All Out' Stage

By the Associated Press

Hectic and historic, the 1940 presidential campaign reached its intensive, "all out" final stage today with both President Roosevelt and Wendell L. Willkie opening their finish drives for the votes which will tell the story on Nov. 5.

For Mr. Roosevelt, his departure from Washington today held unusual significance. If his present plans carry through and he is not recalled to his desk by some important turn in international affairs, the next time he sees the capital he will be either the victor or the vanquished in a third term fight.

For Willkie, the final drive betokened the approaching end of a strenuous campaign which already has taken him into 29 states and over 18,000 miles.

Hoover Speaks

Herbert Hoover spoke last night at Lincoln, Neb., charging Mr. Roosevelt with "sticking pins in tigers all over the world."

The former president told his listeners, "you are far more likely to get into war with Franklin Roosevelt than with Wendell Willkie."

At New York, meanwhile, Henry A. Wallace, the Democratic vice presidential nominee, described as "desperate" Willkie's assertion that if Mr. Roosevelt were reelected, on the basis of his "past performances and promises" the country might expect war by next April.

Wallace said the Willkie charge was "another last minute scheme to snare votes by a party so desperate that it will stoop to anything to stave off defeat."

Among other speeches and campaign statements last night:

Boston—Alfred E. Smith, 1928 Democratic presidential nominee, in an appeal for support for Willkie said that President Roosevelt's Boston speech was "a perfect smoke-screen intended to blot out the new Deal's failures in handling domestic affairs."

Cohoes, N. Y.—Attorney General Jackson said that Willkie's "one and only qualification for the presidency is that he is a lawyer—a Wall Street lawyer."

Caldwell, Idaho—Thomas E. Dewey, New York district attorney, asked the Pacific northwest to demonstrate that it is not "in the bag" for the Democratic party. He recalled that Mr. Roosevelt had not visited the northwest and added: "He thinks you are 'in the bag.'"

Appleton District Board Reports Draft Volunteers

Fifteen young men eligible for the draft have volunteered for a year's military training, the Appleton district draft board announced today.

Dr. C. L. Kolb, a member of the board, said that the board is accepting volunteers and that regulations for their entry into service will be announced soon.

Dr. Kolb confirmed an estimate made yesterday that not more than five men from Outagamie county will be called in the first draft, set at 30,000 men for the entire nation.

The Appleton district board and the board from the second district, which hitherto has had headquarters at Little Chute, both are scheduled to meet at 7 o'clock tonight in the Irving Zuelke building. All three county boards will make their headquarters in the Zuelke building.

The three boards are making preparations for receipt of the master lists from Washington. The lists are in the mails and will be received either Saturday night or Monday morning.

The next step will be the assigning of order numbers in the respective district of the county. The order in which a draftee's number was drawn in the national lottery does not determine his exact district standing, because most of the numbers were higher than the highest in the Outagamie county districts.

Mr. Willkie's Petition

EDITOR'S NOTE—Last March, long before there was anything like the popular demand which resulted in his nomination for the presidency by the Republican party at its convention in June, Wendell Willkie wrote an outline for article which he prepared for Fortune Magazine. This foreword was in the form of a petition and a declaration of principles to the two major political parties before they wrote their political platforms. With the permission of Fortune Magazine it is reprinted herewith:

Before the political platforms are written, we, the people, have a declaration and a petition to make.

"In the decade beginning 1930 you have told us that our day is finished, that we can grow no more, and that the future cannot be the equal of the past. But we, the people, do not believe this, and we say to you: give up this vested interest that you have in depression, open your eyes to the future, help us to build a New World.

"In this decade you have separated 'business' and 'industry' from the ordinary lives of the people and have applied against them a philosophy of hate and mistrust, but we, the people, say: business and industry are part of our daily lives; in hurting them you hurt us. Therefore abandon this attitude of hate and set our enterprises free.

"In this decade you have undertaken vast new obligations, which we support. But because you have not applied to these obligations the ordinary standards of business judgment, you have lost our money by the billions and we, the people, say: give us a businesslike administration that will act as the steward of our prosperity; that will ensure the social progress that is now threatened; and that will manage our affairs at least as intelligently as we manage our own enterprises.

"In this decade, under the banners of reform, you have usurped our sovereign power by curtailing the out of which they can still scrape a nugget or two for themselves.

It will interest only those who think of the United States as their land—a land that they know and love—a land that became rich through the industry, thrift, and enterprise of its people, and will never regain its prosperity in any other way.

Controversies Are Imperiling Defense Program

Politics Playing Part in President's Decisions—Lawrence

WASHINGTON—The American people are in the dark as to what is happening to their national defense program. Half-truths, political camouflage and serious controversies between the radicals and the business men behind the scenes are not only delaying but imperiling the defense program.

The whole trouble, in a nutshell, is that President Roosevelt insists on letting political considerations influence his decisions at a time when experts and technicians should be permitted to decide what is the best way to get production of vital necessities. Here are some of the revelations which illustrate the full effect of having a president of the United States run for a third term in the middle of a critical defense crisis:

1. Mr. Roosevelt told the American people over the air that the Boeing plant in Seattle had increased its production last month by 400 per cent over last year. He didn't reveal how many planes were involved. Authoritative information is that the Boeing plant made one or two planes a month last year, so that if they have increased 400 per cent, they are making eight or less now. The president, for political effect, used 400 per cent, but the facts show it is a negligible number of planes for Uncle Sam's use and is nowhere near the production needed from each plant in order to get the desired 50,000 planes a year.

2. Aubrey Williams and his associates in the National Youth administration were given an excellent plan for the training of youth as apprentices in connection with mechanical trades. The plan called for an expenditure of $6,000,000 in government funds. The apprentices were to be selected. When Aubrey Williams came back from a conference at the White House, the president had insisted that the apprentices be started at the voting age of 21 and over, that high schools be used and that the appropriation be increased to $40,000,000.

It is reported that this money has been allocated to states doubtful as to electoral votes in the present election. The principal expert in the national youth administration who had recommended the plan became so disgusted with this exhibition of politics that he resigned and went back home.

3. Announcement was made the other day that the defense commission had approved the proposed operation by the TVA of an ammonium nitrate plant at Muscle Shoals. This is contrary to the advice and recommendation of the experts, who feel that a better and quicker job can be done by private manufacturers rather than under government operation. Most all of the experts recommended against it, but Chester Davis of the defense commission is reported to have been persuaded to go to the White House with the controversy. When he came back, he gave the president's views, insisting that the TVA do the operating. The defense commission was compelled to agree. The dissent of Mr. Stettinius and Mr. Knudsen was overruled and there is talk that the minutes of the first meeting were even changed so as to eliminate a record of any disagreement. The action taken does not promote sound defense and is purely political. It represents the first major victory of the New Deal radicals over the business men in operating the defense program. The heads of chemical societies say the TVA plant cannot be put into shape as fast as the private plants. The idea, of course, behind it all is the New Deal desire to have a system of government-owned plants to supply farmers with fertilizer once the war is over. This means a tight hold on the farm vote of the future.

4. The defense commission is busy trying to increase industrial production and this means many new plants. To locate these plants means a knowledge of American industrial processes. Yet when Messrs. Stettinius and Knudsen, who have business experience and know something of industrial production, express themselves on the defense commission, their voices are not controlling nor decisive. The vote of the New Deal radicals counts equally, and in the matter of locating plants which came up the other day, Miss Elliott, lately dean of women's college of the University of North Carolina, was found to have as much authority as Mr. Stettinius, former chairman of the board of the United States Steel corporation, and Mr. Knudsen, former president of the General Motors corporation.

With no chairman to run the defense commission and with New Dealers still interested in getting their "social reforms" implanted irrespective of what happens to our national defense program, matters are in considerable of a jam despite the outward signs of progress and the efforts of the political orators on

Buy. 80-Acre Farm in Town of Deer Creek

Eugene Suprise, Jr., has purchased an 80-acre farm in the town of Deer Creek from Evangeline Farwell, et al. The real estate transfer has been filed at the office of Stephen M. Petters, Outagamie county register of deeds. The following transfers also have been filed:

Gerhard J. Rusham to New London Wood and Lumber company, a parcel of land in the town of Liberty.

Margaret W. Magaurn to Gustave Wolts, a parcel of land in Black Creek.

Julia H. Schulze to Carlton Schlitz, a parcel of land in the town of Ellington.

Nina Strassenreuther to Carl Wickman, a parcel of land in Maple Creek.

Paul F. Damro to Peter J. Bergmans, part of a lot in the First ward, Kaukauna.

The New Deal side to paint a rosy picture of defense programs.

When the election is over, all the facts will be forced into view. Congress should make a thorough investigation and insist that a chairman be appointed to run the defense program and keep it absolutely out of politics. While denying vigorously any such aims, the New Dealers seem to be always worried about after-the-war socialist gains. They want to use the defense program to install a system of state socialism. The business men in the defense commission must remain silent these days lest they be accused of disloyalty or of playing politics. But the truth is, nearly all of them are praying for a Willkie victory because they think only in this way will the mess be cleaned up and America's national defense program really sent on its way to successful completion in the shortest possible time.

Use Company Name in Letters to Guardsmen

A number of letters going to Appleton's national guardsmen and artillery band members at Camp Beauregard, La., have been inadequately addressed. Postmaster Stephen Bailliet reported today.

In addition to the man's name, the address should carry "Company D, 127th Infantry" in the case of the guard unit or "120th Field Artillery Band" in the case of the band. Bailliet pointed out. Merely the name and camp are insufficient.

Heart Lead Smart Play Against Bid

BY ELY CULBERTSON

LAST FRIDAY'S QUESTIONS

Question 27: North-South vulnerable, the bidding proceeds:

West North East South
1 diamond 1 heart Pass ?

You are South, and hold:

AK1052 K5 632 KJ10

What call do you make?

Answer: Two spades. With North holding the strength for a vulnerable overall, you must make a determined effort to reach game with your strong hand. Two spades (a single jump takeout) is a one-round force. The "one-over-one" forcing principle (as one spade by you does not apply when partner's bid was an overall (25 points) demerit for one spade; 40 points for any other call, including a pass).

Question 28: You are East, defending against a three no trump contract, the bidding having gone:

North East South West
1 diamond Pass 2 clubs Pass
2 diamonds Pass 2 no trump Pass
3 no trump Pass Pass

West leads the five of spades, dummy ducks, you win with the king, declarer plays the eight. What card do you return, and why?

Answer: The heart queen. You have diamonds stopped and must hope that partner has a club stopper. By immediately driving out declarer's marked heart king, you establish three heart tricks for yourself if West can later get in and lead thru dummy's heart jack (20 points demerit for a spade or club return; 40 points for any other return).

The bidding:

South West North East

1 heart 1 spade 2 diamonds Pass

West opened the king of spades, dummy winning with the ace. It was necessary to take a trump finesse, but the right card had to be led from dummy, to keep the lead there as long as possible if the finesse should win. Declarer therefore led the nine, the correct card. When the nine held, the queen was led and, regardless of what East did, declarer was bound to exhaust the trumps without loss, after which the five diamond tricks could be taken.

A less skillful player would have led the queen at the first trump play, thinking that this was the way to keep the lead in dummy. But if this were done, East would not cover and one of two things would happen: If South played low on the queen, he would have to win the next trump trick in his own hand; if South played the ten under the queen, East could establish a trump trick by covering the nine with the king.

Eggs given to invalids should be unquestionably fresh. Always cook eggs very lightly, otherwise the albumen is coagulated and toughened, and rendered more difficult to digest.

To make celery curls, cut inner stalks into three or four inch lengths. With a sharp knife cut each piece down into thin strips, stopping within an inch of the end. Drop into ice water. Strips will curl up as they become chilled.

Beauty and You

By Patricia Lindsay

So numerous are the women who want to slim that a beauty editor is apt to forget about the underweights! But they have their definite problems too, for being underweight does not help one's appearance and it is detrimental to good health. The too thin girl tires easily and she is quite likely to be nervous as her "protective pad" of fat is not sufficient to act as a shock absorber for her nerves.

What few underweights realize is that their condition is caused because their bodies are not functioning normally. And it is usually in the digestive system where the trouble lies.

First Step

Modern nutritionists advise us to flush out the mucus and impurities which have been collecting for some time and making it impossible for sufficient nourishment to be absorbed from the food we eat. For, as a matter of fact, many of the too-thin girls eat enormous meals! But the food is not absorbed.

Scientific flushing of the body is done by eating nothing but fruit and vegetable juices for a few days. Fruit juices especially recommended are orange, un-sweetened pineapple and tomato. The vegetable juices (taken raw) are: carrot, spinach, beet, celery, parsley and others.

Learn About Foods

Once your digestive tract is clear of disturbing deposits eat sensibly. Include whole grains, fresh green vegetables, fruits every day, young tender meat, and pure milk. Do not drink water with your meals for water has a tendency to dilute the salivary juices in your mouth and to hinder digestion.

Health Drink

Several times a day (between meals) mix one fresh egg yolk with a glass of orange juice. Add to it one tablespoon of honey. Beat until foamy.

Or whip up one or two ripe bananas in a tall glass of milk two or three times a day for ripe bananas furnish the enzyme which helps you to digest other foods.

More Health Rules

Every day the sun shines you should bask in it from one to two hours.

Chew your food very carefully. Never rush your meals. Take time to eat calmly.

As thin types are likely to have smaller stomachs and shorter intestines it is more sensible for them to eat smaller meals but to eat more often.

Exercise self-control. Do not worry so much. Get plenty of rest and let a lot of little detail take care of itself. In other words don't fuss.

Remember that eggs, pecans, all fruits, all whole grains, honey, cheese, lean young meats, milk and cream, steak fish, and all vegetables, are the foods you require to BALANCE your nutrition. Until your menus are balanced, and you are giving your body ALL it needs to gain weight, it will never round out into alluring curves! In time you will instinctively know what and when to eat.

Miss Lindsay's leaflet "How to Make Underweights Beautiful" is again available. Write for it care of this paper and enclose a self-addressed, stamped (3-cent) envelope.

Trim Shirtwaister

BY ANNE ADAMS

Typically American in its casual, carefree style is the shirtwaister mode. Anne Adams offers a youthful version of this favorite style in Pattern 4604—a frock that is matronly in size only. There's slimming lines from every viewpoint, with front and back skirt paneling and the smartest of shoulder yokes. The bodice has been cut with just enough blousing for style and flattery, with its fullness placed "just right" and held by gathers and darts. A to-the-waist buttoning lets you in and out without mussing your curls. Have the young, rounded collar in contrast or matching fabric. Why not make two frocks—one in wool with long sleeves; the other in cotton or rayon with short sleeves?

Pattern 4604 is available in women's sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 36 takes 2 1/2 yards 54 inch fabric.

Send your order to Appleton Post-Crescent, Pattern Department, 243 West 17th St., New York, N. Y.

Send fifteen cents (15c) in coins for this Anne Adams pattern. Write plainly size, name, address and style number.

about half enough. As you can guess, the question is: what about the marking of the new silver? Must it be marked with the same initials that are on hers or shall I have her initials removed and have it all done with my own initials?

To this I can at least advise that the new silver be marked K. S. Whether you can have the old silver remarked depends upon how mother-in-law would feel, and that you will have to find out. If you are in doubt, I would, in your place, keep it as it is. Remember one thing, if the engraving is in the same style, and the outline of the initial approximately the same, few if any will notice that the initials are different—and if they do, it does not matter. It merely gives its family history, which in itself is, in the opinion of most of us, something to be treasured rather than effaced.

"Thank You" for Dinner

Dear Mrs. Post: I know you have said that it is not necessary to send a note in return for dinner and perhaps the evening, but I would like to know if such a note would be altogether out of place in my own case. I was invited to dinner and to go to a play with a friend and his family. I had a most enjoyable time and liked his mother ever so much. I don't want to appear overbearing to make a good impression, and yet I would like to express in some extra way how much I loved being with them. This is what I meant when I said "my own case" because I can hardly make any return for her hospitality.

Answer: Under the circumstances, a note would be entirely proper. If you had wanted to you could have sent her a very few flowers the next morning, and by a few I really mean a few. Half a dozen or even three roses would be all right, because it is a prettier gift than a card. You might still do this if you would like to.

Be sure that your stationery and phraseology is correct, whenever you write a letter. Send for Emily Post's booklet, "The Etiquette of Letter Writing," enclosing ten cents. Address: Emily Post, c/o this newspaper, P. O. Box 75, Station O, New York, N. Y.

My Neighbor Says—

The so-called cord attached to your electric iron is not a cord; it is two bundles of wires. Do not twist it or bend it or tie it in knots.

Weatherstrips on old windows are extremely effective as a means of saving heat and making these old houses habitable. Metal strips are preferred. It is important to have these applied by an expert, as the setting of weather strips is fully half the battle.

To remove fresh cocoa or chocolate stains sprinkle with water and spread with borax, roll up for one hour, rinse in cold water and wash in warm water and soap.

Case Records of a Psychologist

By Dr. George W. Crane

Psychologist, Northwestern University

There is no secret magic to writing salable fiction. You don't need a college degree or wide knowledge of the classics. But you must be a good student of human behavior, for suspense is based on psychology.

Many housewives and office clerks today will be successful fiction writers a few years hence. If you long to be a writer, then study this Case Record with double care.

Case S-117: Matilda J., aged 36, is an intelligent housewife.

"I have reared my children till they are all in high school," she said.

"Now I should like to indulge a secret longing which I have had ever since I was a girl.

"I'd like to write short stories. I never had any courses in fiction writing and don't even know if I have talent, but I have felt this urge so long, I think I am entitled to try my hand at the game.

"Dr. Crane, do you think I am silly? If not, how should I go about it?"

Diagnosis: The essence of successful short story writing is good story telling. If you know how to recount a tale in an interesting fashion, maintaining and building up excellent suspense, with clever characterization and knowledge of human behavior, then you need not worry over minor items like spelling and grammar.

You can quickly learn those things from a dictionary and an English grammar. Or you can hire college graduates at $20 per week to proof-read your material.

In fact, several excellent literary services in this country will give you valuable counsel and advice on all such matters for a fee of 75 cents per 1,000 words.

How To Be A Writer

If you wish to sell your writings, then don't set your plots in Hawaii or some other distant place which you have never visited.

Hawaii, for instance, may embody your romantic day dreaming and be the subject of your personal sentimental thinking, but don't allow your good judgment to be seduced by good emotionalism.

If you want to write about love, choose a familiar locale. Write about the love affairs of a housemaid, if such you are, or the heartaches of a young school teacher with shell rim-glasses. Stick to your own experiences.

Second, study people. Fiction writing is more psychology than English composition. Thousands of English professors cannot write salable stories, essays, poetry or even greeting card verses, not because they do not understand grammar and punctuation, but because they do not know people. Never stand in awe of literary highbrows in your town for they seldom can write salable material. A critic is seldom a producer.

It is easier to criticize 1,000 stories than to write even a single salable one!

Study the Markets

Over 700 weekly and monthly magazines are clamoring for fiction and essays in this country. They pay all the way from 1-cent per word on up. First class rates, as typical of the slick paper magazines of Saturday Evening Post brand, are 5 cents per word and up.

Subscribe to an author's magazine. There are several excellent ones in this country. Read the market lists of magazines which give the editor's name, his magazine's specific preferences regarding fiction, verse, essays, etc., as well as methods of payment.

Don't try to sell to the topmost magazines at the start, for writing is like professional baseball in that you usually need to work your way up to the big league class by way of the minors.

Hire literary criticism from former magazine editors who charge according to word length. Send dime and self-addressed, stamped envelope if you want my bulletin "Hints to Writers." It will give you further specific advice.

Outgrowing Each Other Causes Marital Trouble

BY DOROTHY DIX

The greatest unhappiness in marriage is caused neither by the philanderer, nor the drunkard, nor the nagger, nor the virago, but by either the husband or the wife outgrowing the other. And the tragedy is all the more pitiful because it is one for which no one is to blame unless it is Mother Nature. Neither one planned it. Neither one desired it. Neither one knows when they parted company and one began to climb to the heights while the other stayed put in the low grounds. When they married they never doubted that they were perfectly suited to each other and would make a thoroughly congenial couple. The girl was pretty and sweet and gay. The boy was good-looking and energetic, and full of the high spirits of youth. They liked to dance and listen to the radio and go to football games together. They had a physical attraction for each other and were certain that theirs would be one of the matches made in heaven. So they married in all good faith and then, somehow, the girl became a woman and the boy developed into a man. And there began that slow and insidious process of growth that neither could help that separated those who lived daily side by side farther than it ocean rolled between them, and that made their marriage a death in life.

Sometimes it is the wife who outgrows her husband. He stays, mentally and spiritually, just the nice boy she married, kind and generous, devoted to the wife and the children and a good provider, but with no interests outside of his business and the stock market and the baseball score; while she has read and studied and thought and become a highly intelligent and cultivated woman. He is no more of a companion for her than a child is for a grown-up and her marriage is one long endurance test of how much boredom a human being can stand.

When Interests Diverge

Many of the scandals into which married women get themselves, much of their peevishness and fretfulness, and the sheer brutality with which some of them treat their husbands is to be attributed to the fact that they are adult wives of boy husbands, and that they are as lonely in their own drawing rooms as if they were marooned on a desert island with nobody to speak to who talked their language.

It is, however, oftener the husband who outgrows the wife rather than the other way about. The callow boy who was a suitable enough husband for little Pettikins develops into a brilliant and successful man, while little Pettikins stays just as she was, only not so little and not so pretty.

Nothing is commoner than to see a scintillating, poised man of the world dragging around with him a dumb little cluck of a wife to an accompaniment of whispered "Why did he ever marry her?" A question which must find its echo in his own heart, for where he has gone she cannot follow.

She cannot enter into his hopes and plans and aspirations. She cannot enter into the things that are his life. He asks her for bread and she gives him a stone.

And the suffering, the loneliness, the absence of companionship, the unity, the lack of all that really makes marriage worth while has to be borne by the wife as well as the husband when a man outgrows his wife, for she, too, is desolate and miserable who might have been happy if she was married to a man who was as commonplace as she is.

Don't Marry Too Young

But not much can be done. Sometimes if a couple preceive the danger that threatens their marriage and make an effort to keep in step, they can do so, but not always. For some of us are born groundlings, while others are destined to become the masts of tall ships.

But this common tragedy of husbands and wives outgrowing each other.

Senior John, they have been in the bath. There is not one tickle left."

"Then for goodness sake bring the tickle before Juliana decides he wants it."

Constance stood before the wardrobe wondering why she had brought so few clothes with her, why she had thought so little of clothes in the east; why she had bought nothing, not even a shoe-lace, with the fateful fifty-thousand?

"Dolores, Juliana will have fires, will he not?" she asked, and Dolores came in with the kettle. "And can you run out and pick me a nice fat bunch of white violets?"

Pleading Glances

The dress was of purple chiffon, simple and Grecian in line, a pleated scarf serving for sleeves. With white violets at the high belt, and a few caught with clips that held her long bob back from a center part, she felt she was dressed for the role she must play.

"The men do not bot dress ceremonial," Dolores contributed, "but the Senorita Donita, I have taken for her the ranculas of red, orange and white and she weaves of them the band for her hair, and the dress she wear, Senorita Conchita, it have no back and is like the sun."

Constance scarcely listened. They were waiting for her. She slipped her toes into silver sandals, dabbed violet scent on earlobes and brows, and hurried to the great room of the house.

Purple frock merging with the shadows, Constance stood a moment at the threshold watching the scene, wondering at the chill of apprehension which trickled through her heart like tears.

Candelabras clustered about the far end where the great wood fire augmented their feeble light, and there was Donna, as Dolores had said, in a dress like the sun; golden yellow, billowy sleeves caught in great puffs just below her shoulder, billowing skirts lifting with each vivacious move; wreath of ranculas like gems against the black of her hair.

And then Constance saw her sister's face, the highly arched, slender brows, the heavy lids, the delicate patrician nose, and the wide, hungry red of her lips, lips lifted audaciously to the man who laughed down at her, Pedro.

Constance felt pride in Pedro. He was not the vaquero here, he was the equal of Donna or John. She glanced at John to see him studying Pedro, aloof, the social smile on his lips not reaching his eyes.

"Here comes my girl," boomed a great voice and Peter, the senior, lifted himself, adjusted his crutch and came hobbling across the room to meet her. "Well, Michael, you're a sight for a tired man's eyes."

Constance fitted her hand to the hard muscle of his forearm and matched her step to his. She talked with him, laughed with him, yet all of the time she was conscious of the little drama of the stage ahead. Of Pedro watching John, of Donna looking quickly from Pedro to her, of John coming towards her, possessiveness in every line of his face; in every movement he made.

He was on the other side now, and Constance, longing to pull her arm from his, and hating herself for her revolt against this friend of friends, looking ahead to Pedro, pleaded with him in that glance for understanding.

For one unguarded moment she thought she saw what she wanted to see. She wondered if Donna had seen it, too, but then it was gone and the sardonic expression she remembered from that first night had replaced it.

"Stage entrance!" asked Donna flippantly. "We are starved; aren't we, Mr. Taylor?"

Children Should Learn To Act Instead of Talk

BY ANGELO PATRI

Modern education has stressed the discussion method of learning. Children have been encouraged to discuss all kinds of questions, or been allowed to think they have discussed them. A real discussion would presuppose contributions from both sides of the discussion. When children are studying a subject they cannot contribute much to the fund of knowledge. About all they can do is to talk.

Talking about questions of which they know nothing is not good for children, especially if they talk with the understanding that what they say is important, the truth about a situation, and an enlightenment upon it. This talking gets to be a habit and with it another habit—the taking of oneself seriously.

Encourage Them to Listen

Children under the age of fifteen or thereabout cannot know much about the rights and wrongs of labor, for example. Nor about politics. To let a ten-year-old boy discuss wages and house bills, the moot questions of the hour, not only wastes his time and annoys his elders, but it gives him a false sense of his knowledge, ability and power. He should be encouraged to listen, read, think about these things if they interest him, but he is not to be encouraged to discuss them with an air of authority, or to hold forth on them to a bored audience of adults. These are matters for study by students of mature years and not for childish posing.

We get on the wrong track when we try to get children to copy their elders in these artificial ways. Children of elementary grades are not ready for discussion of grave matters of state and policy. The older boys and girls in high school and college are hard put to it when they are faced with such questions. So are our responsible statesmen, for that matter.

Replace Talk With Action

The children's concern is with their daily lessons in the course of study, their manners and their morals. These require all the attention they can put on them. They have little or none to spare for the discussion of world affairs. It is wise to inform them of what is happening as far as they can take it, but discussions of world situations is not for the elementary classes.

And most of the discussion at home could be well spared. When a child is told that he is to go to his afternoon lessons, take a course in religion, go to dancing school, do an errand, help in the house, the discussion should be cut short and the work attended to promptly, for the child's sake. He must learn to act instead of talk.

About some questions there should be no discussion. A certain leeway is to be granted children who have reached the stage of reasoning and if they have a case to present, allow them to do so. Set them right, agree with them if possible, but cut

FAMILY TRADITIONS

It is always difficult for a bride, who has not known her husband's family well before her marriage, to know what to do in matters that involve the personal sentiments or the family traditions of her in-laws. A bride describes a situation of this sort in a letter:

"My future mother-in-law has given me silver that was hers. It is very beautiful and my fiance and I are delighted to have it. But we don't know what to do about the marking. Her silver is marked with C. M. and will be K. S. and C. M. can't be changed into either. New silver like this can still be bought, and other members of the family are going to give up some to add to hers, as there is only doing themselves to show the Cabrillos that Juliano had trained them as he and his forefathers had been trained.

She knew if Peter Taylor hadn't drawn her into the conversation, drawn out her knowledge of the ranch, she would have remained mute.

John, never talkative, was unusually silent, but at the other end of the table, Donna and Mrs. Cabrillos focused their attention on Pedro, and Constance, remembering his virulent—"damn civilization"—of that afternoon, wondered where he had acquired such civilized social charm.

"No electric lights, no radio; no dance," cried Donna, as they returned to the great room. "What a place! Mother, we must have lights installed immediately."

"If it please the Señora," purred Juliano, "music, of its kind, can be provided."

"Any kind," urged Donna.

And Constance sat in wonder, Juliano, purring.

But she dreaded the music. In the hour it took Juliano to round up the musicians, get them into their velvet bolero suits, she wondered if she could plead weariness, a headache, anything.

Both pleas would have been true. She sat by the fire with John, pleasantly quiet beside her, the faithful, and yet now he seemed to be jailing who was keeping her apart from the others. They didn't seem to miss her, even Peter Taylor had succumbed to the beauty of Nadine.

And then came the music. Donna was in Pedro's arms almost before the first guitar was strummed, and John was standing before her, waiting.

"Why did you run out on me this afternoon?" he murmured in her ear.

"I didn't run out on you," she corrected. "I've never been fond of family bickering."

They circled the room—"Surprised to find me here?" he asked.

Constance wished he wouldn't hold her so tightly. Had he changed, grown more possessive, or was she merely aware of it for the first time because of a change in herself?

"Amazed," she confessed.

"Pleased that I came west just to see you?"

Constance looked up—"Yes, John." She was. It gave her the opportunity of telling him what she had found too difficult to write.

"Orange blossoms are sweetest in June, six," offered Donna whirling past in Pedro's arms.

Startled she looked at Donna to find her position reversed and seeing Pedro's face: white, set, contemptuous. She wondered what else Donna had said in her gay, free voice which didn't reveal the studied pertinence of her remarks.

"Donna seems to have fallen for 'ng Taylor,'" John remarked in amused voice. "It won't last."

He's too easy for Donna, a tires of men who crash at the set lift of her eyebrow.

Constance knew jealousy; a blazing searing emotion which burned the words on her lips. Donna intended to take Pedro as she had taken the Cabrillos role that afternoon, lightly, as her just due.

It occurred to her that John Raskthorne was the only person or possession Donna hadn't been able to claim.

"I apologized for my mistake, this afternoon," John went on. "Told him that when a fellow crosses the continent to see the one girl in his life, he doesn't pay much attention to anyone else."

Constance knew defeat. How explain that to Pedro?

"We matched for my tip," John chuckled, "and he won. Said a funny thing. He said, 'Never gamble with me, Raskthorne. I always win.'"

Begin Improvement Of Camp Near Sparta.

Madison—Work of enlarging and improving Camp Williams, Wisconsin's national guard training grounds near Sparta, was started this week as part of the national defense program. Mark Muth, state works projects administrator, announced today.

The project will cost about $500,000. Approximately 450 men will be employed after a work camp has been established this month. It is expected the work will be completed late next spring.

"We should have one of the finest national guard training camps in the country when the work is completed," Muth said. "The project has two main objects: first, to expand the airport so that efficient training of an airforce will be possible; and second, to improve the housing and sanitary facilities of the encampment to protect the health of soldiers in training. In addition, facilities for training and buildings for storage of federal equipment will be improved."

Today and Tomorrow

BY WALTER LIPPMANN

The National Defense and Labor and Politics

Although all are agreed that the production of armaments should be speeded up although it is certain that production of armaments should be speeded up although it is certain that the subject is never mentioned by the campaign orators. But once the election is over this taboos subject will emerge as the most urgent of the domestic issues before the people.

The problem is how to get quicker deliveries from the plants which now have the defense contracts and how to get quicker results in expanding old plants and in building new ones. The answer is that among the things it would be desirable to do, the one thing which will certainly produce the greatest and quickest practical results is to increase the number of hours worked per week. For American industry is now working on a shorter schedule of hours per week than is the industry of any other nation. The experience of every other country proves that a forty-hour week can be lengthened, and that extra hours can be worked more quickly without impairing the health or the efficiency of the workers.

This was admitted by Mr. Clegg when recently the heads of work in government arsenals were increased from 40 to 48 hours.

As a matter of fact, labor itself does not regard the short forty-hour week, which is now fixed by law and union agreements as a measure to prevent men from overworking. No one seriously concerned with the question has ever contended that the rule is meant to protect men from working more than forty hours, the purpose of the rule is not to limit hours but to increase wages by the payment of a higher hourly rate for overtime. It is important to fix this clearly in mind. For it proves that there is no objection in principle and no objection as a matter of social policy to a longer working week. If the national interest calls for a longer working week to speed up production, there is nothing in the rule which says that a longer working week would be unjust to labor or would impair the health and the efficiency of the workers. What the rule says is that above the fixed minimum labor is entitled to extra compensation.

Problem Is How To Finance Extra Work

If it is decided, and it ought promptly to be decided, that for the period of the emergency a longer working week is needed, then the real problem is how this extra production is to be financed. It would be easy enough to appropriate more money to cover any amount of time-and-a-half or double time, and if this were done the weekly pay envelopes would contain a lot more money. But it is plain that if labor started to spend all this money, the time would soon come when the greatly increased demand for consumer's goods would cause the cost of living to rise. Very quickly, then, the higher earnings would buy no more than the present earnings of labor, probably less. Labor, and every one who has a bank account, an insurance policy, a pension, or a fixed income of any kind would be caught in a vicious spiral of inflation.

The real question, therefore, is how to lengthen the working week and yet to preserve the rights of labor without cheating labor through a drastic rise in the cost of living. Though there are several ways in which the question can be answered, in the last analysis they all come down to the same thing. The extra pay for the extra work cannot be spent during the period of the emergency. The United States can certainly arm without sacrificing any of the real necessities of life. But it cannot arm rapidly and on a great scale and at the same time increase the standard of life. Any one who says this is possible is talking politics and not the truth, and any one who does in this emergency increase his normal standard of life ought to be very uncomfortable when he thinks of the men who are already at sea with the fleet, the men now in the army and the air force, the men who will be called to the training camps.

There are several ways in which a longer working week can be had without inflating the cost of living. Labor can agree to suspend for the period of the emergency some part of the extra pay for overtime. Or labor can agree to a graduated emergency tax on excess earnings. Or, a plan might be worked out, similar to one suggested by Mr. J. Keynes, in England, under which labor would agree not to spend a few but instead to invest its excess earnings in government bonds and in securities certified as designed to finance the expansion of necessary industries. Or, the government can prevent a sudden increase of consumption by rationing the more luxurious forms of consumption. Or, as is most probable and desirable, the problem can be met by applying moderately a mixture of some or all of these methods. The problem of means is clearly kept in mind—namely that during the emergency it is necessary to do more work and not to increase consumption.

There Will Be Problems No Matter Who Wins

This great contribution by labor to the national defense is, with exception only of that of the men in the armed forces, the greatest contribution which can be made by any members of the community. It is an immediate and indispensable contribution to the peace and security of the nation and to the defense of the embattled democracies.

Plainly, this contribution can be made only if there is no shadow of doubt that it is made for the national defense and not for the benefit of any private interest; it can be made only if the rest of the community willingly bear any sacrifices that can be asked of them.

Above all it can be made only if it is done not merely with the consent of union labor but on the initiative of representatives of labor acting as trusted and responsible members of the organization of national defense. It can be done effectively and successfully only if the rank and file of labor trust their leaders and their leaders trust the administration in office.

We shall be face to face with the problem as soon as the election is over. If Mr. Roosevelt is re-elected the question will be whether the confidence which the great mass of labor have in him can be maintained if he asks for sacrifices from labor. The case of Mr. John L. Lewis indicates the difficulty.

If Mr. Willkie is elected, the question will be whether he can quickly gain the confidence which most of labor does not now have in him and his party, or whether he can be helped to gain that confidence by the Democrats. There too the case of Mr. John L. Lewis indicates the difficulty.

For the position of Mr. Lewis is that he will resign from the C. I. O. if Mr. Roosevelt is re-elected, but that if Mr. Willkie is elected, he will remain and will expect to be regarded as the recognized leader of the American labor movement. Thus Mr. Lewis has staked his future as a labor leader upon the outcome of the election, and has identified the political contest between Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Willkie with the old contest inside organized labor. This is no service to Mr. Willkie and it is a grave disservice to the nation. For it means that the remarkable unity which labor has achieved under the defense program is in danger of being destroyed no matter how the election goes; either Mr. Lewis becomes an insurgent and disruptive force outside the labor movement or he becomes a dictatorial and disruptive force within it.

This is a very serious prospect at a time when the only way to arm the nation more quickly is to enlist the full cooperation of labor.

TONIGHT'S GAMES
Fond du Lac at Oshkosh.
Sheboygan North at East.

SATURDAY'S GAMES
Central at Manitowish.
Green Bay West at Appleton.

Charles Kliefoth, whose individual efforts have resulted in Appleton High school football team becoming a threat in Fox Valley conference circles, will be lost to the Terrors for the remainder of the season. It was announced yesterday. Kliefoth has a broken bone in his right hand.

While Kliefoth was ailing during direct the Terrors, the team's chances against Green Bay West here tomorrow skidded almost to the bottom. Kliefoth has been the only offensive spark the Terrors have had and his passing last week against Fond du Lac, and an 85-yard return for a touchdown with a punt, kept the Terrors in the game. It also was Kliefoth who passed for a touchdown against Manitowish when the Terrors upset the Ships.

The loss of Kliefoth means that either Roger Niles or Rocky Dickson or both will be used in his place. Their weaknesses, however, are the same. Neither has the experience nor the poise of Kliefoth and their defensive ability is far short of the veteran halfback.

Work on Defense
While Kliefoth was ailing during the week, the Terrors used several combinations in offensive drills. The results left a lot to be desired. However, the defensive work of the team has improved and, given any kind of a break, Appleton may be able to hold the Wildcats.

Other backs in the starting lineup probably will be Buesing at fullback, Nickasch at right half, and Bill DeLong at the blocker.

After its outstanding effort against Fond du Lac, there's no reason to believe there will be any change in Appleton's starting line. Burton and Cooper will be at the ends with most of the passes fired at the latter. The tackles will be Murphy and Pekarske with Kain and Wettengel at the guards and Carrie at center.

Green Bay, Coach Lars Thune, been juggling his lineup in an effort to get more touchdowns. Bob Billecette has been designated for left half with either Earl DeWitt or Loyal Hayda at left half. Bob Under appears to have clinched the fullback spot with Rodney Crevier or Jim Riley as the blocker.

Bill Nenn or George Farah will start at right guard, while Ray Staszak will be at left. Andy Brin or Roger Noll are likely to go in at center. Tom Bennett and Don Thompson will be the ends, and Bill Bodilly and Ivor Hennig the tackles.

Won Two, Lost Two, Tied One
West has won two and lost two with one game a tie. Appleton has two wins and three defeats. West has scored 68 points while Appleton has counted only 47. The defensive records show West has allowed 46 points and Appleton 67. West lost to Fond du Lac by a greater margin than Appleton and tied with Sheboygan Central before whom Appleton bowed in the second half after being tied at the end of the first half.

In the other conference games, only the Fond du Lac-Oshkosh game appears to be close. Fondy has been having a good season and is in second place. Oshkosh has been staving a comeback and will be geared high for the Cardinals. Green Bay East battles North and should have a romp with reserves getting a lot of work. Sheboygan Central takes on the Champagne-less Manitowish team and should get the nod.

Di Maggios Ready If the Army Calls

BY RUSSELL NEWLAND
San Francisco — (AP) — Baseball's two Di Maggios here, Joe and Dominic, are ready and willing to do their training stretch in the army, if and when called.

So is their brother Tom, who acts in an advisory capacity on contracts and runs the restaurant when Joe is belting balls for the Yankees. And Dominic is doing the same for Mr. Red Sox.

R. drew a draft number in the West. Joe's number is 8333. Eddie's heavy glasses of necessity 201, ants no exemption because of Stinger defect.

Drise makes no claims as a home Twitter in the public speaking. Ah, of military training, he says, "It's something that has to be. Ah, I'm ready any time they are. He's Dominic."

Champaign, Ill. — (AP) — Coach Bob Zupke, whose Illinois eleven plays Wisconsin tomorrow, capped yesterday's workout with the remark: "I'd be satisfied if you fellows win by just a half point."

A dummy scrimmage against freshmen, using Wisconsin players, concluded the Illini's lightest week of drills since the season opened.

Joe Turek, ailing right guard, and George Rettinger, injured halfback, were not expected to make the trip to Madison.

Of the offers, which he declined to amplify, Viti said:

"I came up from the minors and I'll go back to them—if the price is right."

Gophers Bidding For Top Honors Against 'Cats

Win for Minnesota
Will Put Team in National Title Race

BY ARNOLD DERLITZKI

Chicago — (AP) — The pre-Thanks-giving carving of Western conference football honors—expected to be completed on successive weekends by the undefeated Minnesota, Northwestern and Michigan eleven—begins at Evanston tomorrow. There 48,000 fans will jam Dyché Stadium to watch mighty Minnesota and a powerful Northwestern team try to wrest the first slice.

Michigan's turn comes next week when the Wolverines meet the Gophers. If, after that meeting, the title cut was still disputed, it would be up to Michigan and Northwestern to deliver the decisive thrust Nov. 16.

Michigan's turn comes next week when the Wolverines meet the Gophers. If, after that meeting, the title cut was still disputed, it would be up to Michigan and Northwestern to deliver the decisive thrust Nov. 16.

Not only conference but national recognition hinges on the outcome of these operations, for all three rivals are unbeaten outside the conference.

Michigan is idle this week, but Minnesota and Northwestern go to work tomorrow each boasting of four straight successes — the Gophers over Washington 13-14, Nebraska 13-7, Ohio State 13-7 and Iowa 34-6; and the Wildcats over Syracuse 40-0, Ohio State 6-3, Wisconsin 27-7 and Indiana 20-7.

Leading the usually punishing Minnesota attack will be George Franck and Bruce Smith. Opposing them will be a line that has played with few substitutions in three successive conference games and such backs as Don Clawson, Red Hahnstien and Bill De Correvont, although the latter still is limping from an ankle injury suffered in the Wisconsin game.

Possession of the ball may supply the key to a Wildcat victory. Statistics show that Minnesota's opponents have averaged 555 yards per try, compared with 564 for the Gophers, but they haven't possessed the ball nearly as much. Where Minnesota carried the ball 192 times, its opponents were limited to 128 attempts.

Three other conference games will be played tomorrow. Indiana goes to Ohio State, Purdue to Iowa and Illinois to Wisconsin. Two of the teams, Purdue and Illinois, still are seeking their first conference triumph. The other eleven each have one victory to show for their efforts.

Purdue's two setbacks were the result of last minute kicks. A field goal gave Ohio State a 17-14 edge and a conversion gave Wisconsin a 14-13 decision. The Boilermakers are hoping for a change in the trend, Illinois, in its only conference attempt, lost to Michigan 28-0.

Ripon May Not Show Up for Tomorrow's Homecoming Game But Vikes Say 'Baloney'

Ripon—(By Special Hearse)—Can a team consisting of seven linemen and only one one-legged halfback defeat a tough and respected opponent who is blessed with a forward wall equally stout plus a normal complement of four capable backfield performers, all reasonably fit? Brushing aside minor issues, that's the major question at Ripon college on the eve of the homecoming game with Lawrence here Saturday.

Naive undergraduates, duped no doubt by a merely unreasoning college loyalty, are definitely positive that Ripon can stage a fight regardless of the odds. Even the publicity bureau here is assuming a specious optimism. It spreads the hollow comfort that because Ripon has done the impossible in other Lawrence games, that can be done again. Write that off as facile propaganda deliberately concocted to lure the old grads back.

Here Are the Facts
Disagreeable facts must be faced. Seven and one-half men, haunted by a bad season, can't compete on equal terms with 11 others sound in wind, limb and confidence. Moreover, Ripon, with only seven points totalled in five games, cannot reasonably hope to outscore Lawrence, with the latter's record of 95 points in the same number of tilts.

Never since the days of Leif Ericson have the Vikings had such an advantage over the Redmen. The saga of that old Norseman may be peppered with fiction but there's no myth about the weak physical state of the Redmen. Commiserate them as in reduced numbers they huddle in their wigwams tonight, courageously awaiting the morrow.

The one-legged back is Captain "Swede" Krcmar. He broke an arch in his foot in the first quarter of Ripon's opener. He appeared for a few minutes only, three games later against Beloit. Last Saturday he hobbled painfully through most of the Carleton tilt. Against the Vikes he'll have to do all the passing, running and kicking while his luck holds out. When he's through, the game will be delayed until the ambulance driver returns from the hospital to climb from his seat and take "Swede's" place. There just isn't anybody else except the water boy.

It's a Sad Story
The other regular backs are in such sad physical state that the tenth national draft would reject them. Ken Miller pulled some ankle tendons in the Beloit game. Ken, next to Beloit's Eddie May, was the fastest streak in the conference. Bud Christensen, Ripon's ace blocker, ruined a leg in the same contest. "Sarge" Peters, signal caller and distance punter, has been carrying a shoulder in a sling since last Saturday and is through until 1941. Les Krause, a veteran of two seasons' ago who returned this fall after being out a year, caught a bad leg injury at Carleton and he's done. Wally Winslow, sophomore flash, has a broken nose. Del Bowling, a promising first year man, may play though a shoulder injury still hurts him.

Even Coach Deehling couldn't hazard a guess on the makeup of his makeshift backfield during the week. It looks like half-a-man Krcmar, third stringer "Chuck" Dickow and Sam Dubow and second stringer Carl Gatzke. The Vikings will probably pass that inexperienced and crippled quartet blind.

So impotent has the Ripon offense been all week that the alleged first team has scored only twice on the fresh, once when it was so dark that the old shoe-string play was tried as a stunt.

There's some solace in admitting

On this basis the odds of 5 to 8 favoring Overlin seemed well within reason.

Overlin Defends Crown Tonight

BY JUDSON BAILEY

New York — (AP) — It took Ken Overlin, an ex-sailor from Virginia, 13 years of battling all over the world to ascend to the middleweight throne recognized by New York and he hasn't any intention of exiting in his first title defense.

Nobody thinks he will be in any great danger, therefore, when he bumps into 21-year-old Steve Beloit of New York in a 15-round championship bout at Madison Square Garden tonight.

Beloise, nine years younger than his foe, was just a semi-final boxer last May on the card that brought Overlin his "middle-weight" title, recognized in New York and California, with a victory over Cefarino Garcia. He knocked out Victor Delicourt in one round that night and last September he earned the right to face Overlin by outpointing Garcia himself.

But Beloise, in spite of his youth and power, still is an inexperienced ringmaster with only 33 fights to show against the clever champion's 151.

On this basis the odds of 5 to 8 favoring Overlin seemed well within reason.

THINK YOU CAN MAKE IT SWEDE? — Ripon college coaches are shown here giving the once over to their one-man, one-legged backfield, Swede Krcmar, as tomorrow's game with Lawrence nears. It will be Ripon's homecoming. Krcmar is the ace back of the Crimson squad but has been out of action in several games.

to a strong defensive line. Tiny Croft, who bulks 275 pounds, is canny as well as tough at tackle. Karl Gierhahn at the other tackle spot is as good as they come. Guards Don Anderson and Harold Palmer are better defensively than on offense. Center Harry Knop has demonstrated remarkable progress for a sophomore. Jim Rember, at one of the wins, is a reliable pass snatcher; Keith Kuehn, at the other end, is the smartest performer at that post in the conference. These boys will have to endure almost 60 minutes, since possible replacements except for Wallischlaeger and Schwass, tackle and guard, aren't too experienced.

Pride forbids the Ripon coaching staff from forwarding the suggestion. There are rumors hereabouts, however, that the mayor of the city seriously considers petitioning Presidents Barrows and Evans to adjust the squad inequalities by changing the game to a six man contest.

That's high treason on the Ripon campus where the old tradition reigns that seven and one-half Redmen can lick eleven Vikings any old time.

Worried over the fact that when Ripon college gridders are having a bad season they usually come through in their homecoming game, Lawrence college gridders today prepared to invade the home of the Redmen for the said homecoming struggle. It will be renewal of a grid rivalry that has occurred more or less annually since 1895.

Another angle of the game which worries Coach Bernie Heseltin is the lack of word from Ripon as to what is going on. Heseltin believes, the Redmen are planning an ambush, or something, and admitted during the week he was getting jittery.

The season opened with Ripon as a defending Midwest champion and, on paper, doped to be a contender. Since then the Redmen have run into trouble and have been shutout in four of five games. The prin-

Home Town Boys Become Stars On Gridiron for Tennessee Vols

BY DON WHITEHEAD

Knoxville, Tenn.—(AP)—The home-town boys are doing all right with the Tennessee Volunteers.

In fact, seven of Major Bob Neyland's brightest stars—three line-men and four backs—are home-grown products who didn't have to leave home to have their talent recognized.

You may find one or more of them in the All-America lineup at the close of the season if they play the same sparkling brand of football which crushed Duke 13-0.

Here they are:

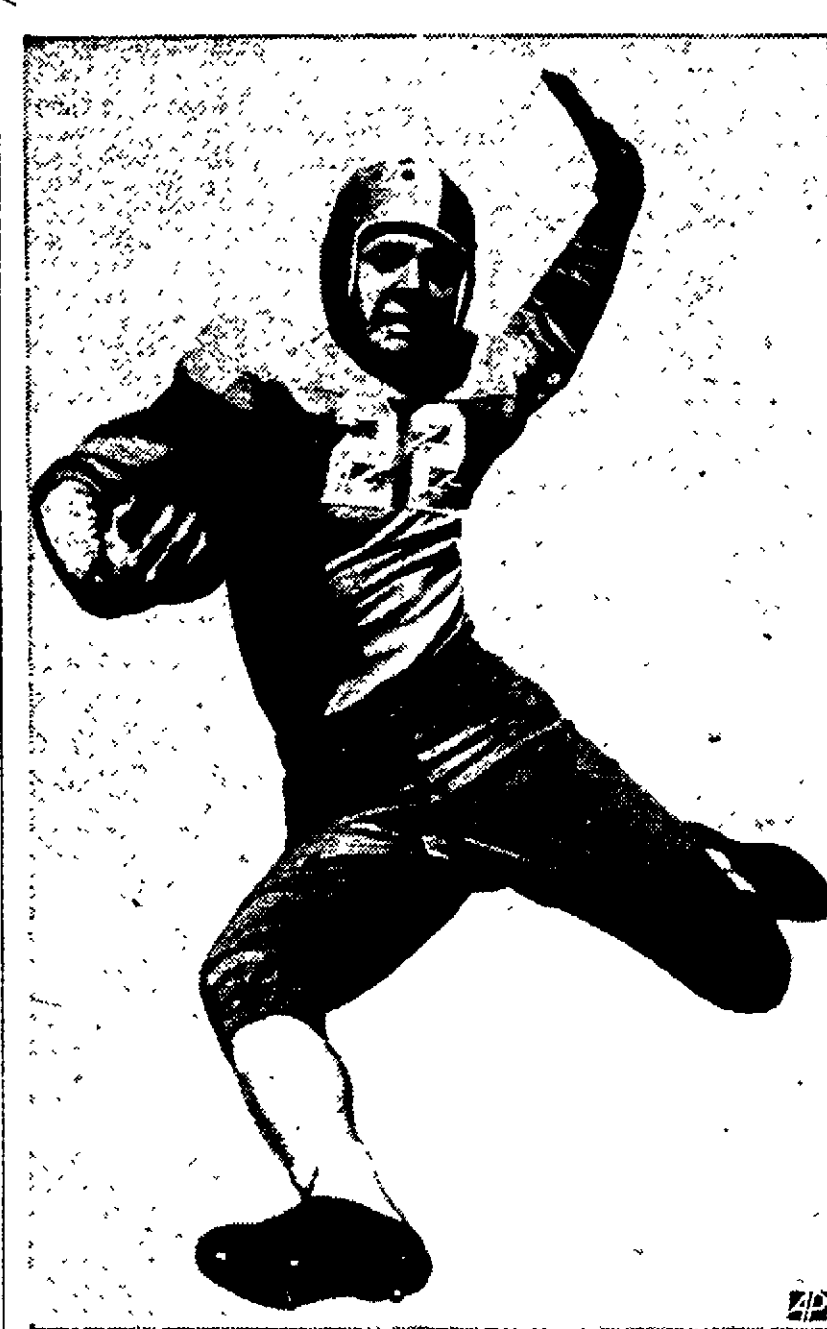

Robert (the ripper) Foxx, a big blond lad who is making Tennessee fans forget about George Cageto in the important tailback spot. . . . Bob was the hero of the Duke conquest, passing to Substitute End "Al" Hust for the first touchdown, kicking the extra point, and then scoring the second marker himself through the line. . . . He played for two years at the wing-back position with little chance to shine as a ball carrier. . . . And now he has his chance for football glory for Tennessee's tailback does most of the passing, kicking and running.

Eel-Hipped Rebel

Johnny (Reb) Butler, an eel-hipped little fellow who spells Foxx at the tailback spot and can run, pass and kick with the best of them. . . . It was Johnny who broke loose in the Alabama game last year with a sensational 67-yard broken field run to spark the Vols to a victory over the Tide. . . . He came through with 67- and 50-yard runs against Alabama this year.

Bob Suffridge, one of the finest guards in the national and a defensive wheel-hoss. . . . Bob's admirers thought he would have beat out his teammate, Ed Molinski, for All-America honors last fall if he hadn't been injured in mid-season and forced to the sideline during the last half of the campaign. . . . But his bad knee appears to be coming along in good shape this year.

Bob Andridge, understudy to Foxx last year, has been shifted

JOHNNY BUTLER

Can run, pass and kick with the best to the wingback post on the starting lineup and is one of the most improved players on the squad. . . . He's fast, does the 100 in better than 10 seconds, and is the hardest blocker among the Vols. Fred (Ox) Newman, a rangy, 192-pounder, was the only sophomore backfield man to get into the first-string lineup on Tennessee's undefeated, untied, and unscored on team of 1939. This year he is alternating at wingback and fullback on the No. 2 team.

Cock Pheasant Kill in State Will be Far Below Last Year

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau
Madison—Despite an accentuated artificial stocking program this year, natural factors make it likely that the total cock pheasant kill in Wisconsin during the present open season will be below the total number of birds taken by hunters last year, according to William F. Grimmer, game chief in the state conservation department.

The two factors mitigating against a heavy kill this year, according to Grimmer:

Heavy spring rains, which had a detrimantal effect on the annual hatch, and on young birds.

Unusually heavy natural cover during the fall shooting season, also a result of the copious early season rainfall.

The rains depopulated some regions severely, he pointed out, particularly in the Horicon marsh area in southeastern Wisconsin, which area has a considerable proportion of the total number of hunters. At the same time the rainfall brought about a particularly luxuriant crop of vegetation, which together with a mild autumn, makes hunting difficult this month in the whole eastern, central and southern portions of the state.

Meanwhile nearly complete department reports indicated a considerable rise in stocking activities this year.

While the department believed that it had attained the peak mark last year with a total of 225,000 birds distributed, this year's mark will rise to at least 250,000, it was reported.

The bulk of the stocking is in the form of chicks or young birds, although a large number of nest-grown birds are released later in the season.

The pheasant, not a native species, has become the "king" of the upland game birds of Wisconsin, according to department records. Approximately 400,000 of them will be taken this year, if hunters are approximately as successful, allowing for changed circumstances, as they have been in earlier years.

New London Athletes On River Falls Squad

New London—Former New London High school athletes are making a name for themselves on the football team of River Falls State Teachers college.

Leland Dobberstein, a junior now, is rated one of the star tackles on the regular first string. Dave Wilson and Kenneth Poppy, both freshmen, are on the squad, the former as a guard, the latter an end. The boys will play their last conference game at LaCrosse Saturday. Five other New London boys are attending the school which specializes in agriculture courses.

New Deal Debt Record Hit in Campaign Talk

Zimmerman Urges
Heil Reelection in
New London Address

New London—"Seventy billion dollars in the hole" was the keynote of a talk by Fred R. Zimmerman, secretary of state, when he touched on national issues before a small Republican rally at Veterans of Foreign Wars hall last night.

Completing a circuit of Waupaca county discussing national and state election issues, the former governor denounced the New Dealers as apart from the true American Democratic party and upheld the record of the Heil administration.

Charges that the state is in debt can be refuted by the fact that an average of 13 million dollars is on hand in the general fund and has been all during the administration, he said. Pointing out that the state's fiscal year runs from June to June, he said that 17 million dollars more in county and town aids were provided by the state during the first year of Heil's term than any Progressive year, and that 8,000 more persons were given pension aid.

Scores Mounting Cost
Recalling a Roosevelt pledge to run the government at less expense, Zimmerman said that just the interest alone on the present debt would have run the entire government 25 years ago. Government employees have been increased by the millions and more national boards and commissions have been created than there were ever before, he said.

He warned against the dictatorial powers which would come with a third presidential term. After praising old Bob LaFollette, Sr., the speaker scored young Senator Bob for his support of Roosevelt for a third term. He pointed out that 10 years ago young Bob himself introduced a bill into congress condemning a third term as disastrous to democracy. He termed Bob "the gentlemen from Virginia" who should run for senator from Virginia where, he charged, his family lives.

C. B. Ballard, Appleton, an old campaign veteran, was called on by Chairman E. W. Wendlandt who introduced the speakers, and Ballard too chided Senator LaFollette for deserting the principles of his famous father.

Women's Auxiliary To Episcopal Church Meets at New London

New London—About 90 women delegates from northern Wisconsin attended a meeting of the Women's auxiliary to the Wisconsin Valley Convocation of Episcopal Churches Thursday at St. John church. The Right Rev. Harwood Sturtevant, Fond du Lac, bishop of the diocese, led the worship service which closed the meeting in the afternoon. The Rev. William C. Way, Wausau, dean of the convocation, also was present. The Rev. B. L. Marell, Waupaca, is pastor of the New London church. Next autumn's meeting of the organization will take place at Stevens Point.

High School Pep Club Will Sponsor Masquerade Party

New London—The annual all-school party will be held at Washington High school next Wednesday evening, Nov. 6, in the form of a masquerade. Students will come masked and prizes will be offered for the best costumes. Besides dancing there will be games sponsored by classes, and various contests.

The party is sponsored by the Pep club and the chairman in charge are as follows: Entertainment, Dolores Brault; publicity, Allen Ziebur; dance, Dick Wyman; prizes, Alice Davy; tickets, Theodora Herres; refreshments, Geraldine McPeak.

The Thursday Bridge club met with Mrs. Harvey Romberg yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Rude Smith won the prize and will be hostess next week.

RED CORPUSCLES

Often I have found that a boy or girl supposes there must be air "everywhere."

Perhaps that is a natural thing to come to mind. Wherever we walk, we find air, so why shouldn't we expect to find air all the way to the moon?

A person might "expect" air all the way to the moon, but he wouldn't find it. Scientists tell us that the air around the earth goes up a certain distance and then there is no more of it.

Anyone who climbs a high mountain will go through air which becomes thinner and thinner. At a height of two miles, you will have enough to breathe, but it will be best for you not to turn around very much. Hard exercise at such a level is a danger to the heart, unless you are used to it.

If a person spends a month or two on a mountain top, the number of red corpuscles in his blood will grow larger. Red corpuscles carry oxygen from the lungs to the cells. When we have more of them, we can take more of the oxygen from the air. That is why a mountaineer is able to get along very well even though he lives high up in the world.

Aviators have tested the air at heights of from three to ten miles. When they go above the three-mile level, it is important to take along a supply of oxygen. The air is too thin to give them enough oxygen.

Five years ago two Americans were lifted by a balloon to a height of almost 14 miles. So-called "sounding balloons" have been sent up by weather experts and have risen a few miles higher.

Tests have proved the air gets thinner and thinner at greater heights. We have reason to believe this is true until there comes a place with no air at all, or so little that it would be quite lost in space.

When meteors shoot through the air around the earth, they run against it and glow. A meteor is a dark object until that happens.

Careful study has been made of points at which meteors begin to glow. Scientists estimate there is extremely thin air at heights of from 400 to 500 miles. Study of the Aurora Borealis has helped prove the point.

It is possible to pump just about all the air out of a jar. What is left is a vacuum.

From a height of 500 miles above the earth to the moon, a vast vacuum is believed to exist. This vacuum no doubt spreads through almost every part of the universe.

The moon appears to have no air around it, but certain planets have some. Mars is supplied with a blanket of thin air, and Venus has rather thick air and fog.

Storekeeper Is Held
After Youngster Is
Wounded at Menasha

Menasha—Hassan Mastafa, 40, 64 Abbey avenue, was held in Menasha city jail last night and questioned in Oshkosh this afternoon in connection with the shooting of Lloyd King, 10, son of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac King, 62 Abbey avenue, last evening.

King, it was reported, had been shot in the fleshy part of his right thigh by a bullet from a .32 calibre revolver. The bullet was removed from the boy's leg by Dr. Richard Jensen, city physician. His condition is not serious.

Police said they took a revolver, which had two bullets fired, from Mastafa, but he denied he fired the gun, according to Chief Alex Slomski. The chief said he had been told Mastafa, apparently angered at the Halloween activities of a group of small youngsters, rushed out of his grocery store and fired two shots.

The first shot missed Peter Mayer, 8-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Mayer, 219 Mathewson street. The second struck the King youngster who was standing on his own porch when he was hit.

Outside of the shooting, Halloween was quiet in Menasha, the chief said. Fred Young, 248 Ahnapp street, reported that a rock was thrown through a window at his home at 10 o'clock last night. The police department received about 15 calls last night.

'Didn't Even Soap Windows,' Stilp Says of Halloweeners

Neenah—"They didn't even soap windows!" was Police Chief Irving Stilp's comment this morning in describing Neenah's quietest Halloween night on record.

The chief credited the unusually quiet night to two things, the Halloween carnival sponsored by the Neenah Kiwanis club and the recreation commission, and a crew of about 10 "junior policemen" patrolling the streets.

More than 2,000 children crowded into the recreation building to attend the carnival, Manager Paul Stacker, general chairman of the party, reported this morning.

According to police reports, the only damage done last night was a broken window. There were an unusually small number of complaints.

Popular Features
Forty-five gallons of ice cream as well as 10 bushels of apples, 75 ice cream bars, 200 orange drinks and numerous prizes were given the children. The most popular events were the motion pictures, BB shooting gallery, floor show and dancing.

Hundreds of children under 12 years of age were waiting at the doors at 5 o'clock. Their part of the party wasn't scheduled until 5:30. The others opened their show with a parade led by members of Neenah High school's band from the business district to the play center.

More than 30 men and high school boys were recruited to help stage the carnival.

After the 70 high school boys finished patrolling the streets, they were given a lunch by the police department at the Neenah club. High school girls served.

The Kiwanis club financed the Halloween carnival. A committee consisting of Ed Christoph, chairman, Lyall Williams, A. H. Angermeyer, Otto Steffenhagen and Raymond C. Lochung assisted in planning.

Rotary Club Hears Talk on Taxation

Neenah—Despite the fact that the tax rate in Neenah during the last few years apparently has remained the same, there actually has been increases in taxes. W. H. Clifford, treasurer of the Kimberly-Clark corporation, asserted in a talk at the noon meeting of the Rotary club Thursday at the Valley Inn.

It is a misstatement when local officials announce that the tax rate is the same, he said, and explained that when the base is increased and the rate isn't reduced, there is an increase in taxes.

Clifford contended that if the federal government tripled all of its income and eliminated the army and navy, it would take 10 years to pay up the national debt.

Clifford discussed increases in federal income taxes between 1928 and this year. He said that the state didn't boost the income tax so much, but it did it more cleverly than the federal government.

He also discussed the excess profit tax and other forms, such as the excise taxes and sales taxes.

Norman Thomas For LaFollette

Removal From Senate
Would be Mistake, He Tells Milwaukee Rally

Milwaukee—Norman Thomas, Socialist candidate for president, last night endorsed the candidacy of Senator LaFollette (P-Wis) and declared that "people who want to vote for keeping America out of war have no choice between the major parties and their candidates."

Speaking at a Socialist rally, Thomas said that it would be "little short of a national disaster" if Wisconsin should remove LaFollette from the senate.

"I am, of course, aware that Senator LaFollette has given his qualified support to the reelection of President Roosevelt for a third term," he said, "and I am aware of the political reasons for it."

"Nevertheless, it is something more than personal interest which makes me point out the peculiar danger which peace lovers run when they vote for the president."

"Tragedy Of The Hour" Thomas asserted that it was "the tragedy of the hour that the Roosevelt who won the affection of the American people by his domestic reforms, should use that affection to throw us into the fascism which war and imperialism inevitably mean."

In his Chicago address Wednesday night Thomas called Wendell L. Willkie "the Republican candidate of the war machine."

Roosevelt, he said, "is a candidate of the same machine."

"He (Roosevelt) has led us to accept peacetime conscription as if for the defense of our shores, a task which in reality calls for no conscripts."

"They are the potential cannon fodder for imperialist adventure," Thomas said that President Roosevelt "consciously or unconsciously has capitalized our panic fear of Hitler in order to play in incredibly dangerous game of empire."

"It is only a vote for the Socialist ticket which will register your opposition to such adventures and to war," he said. "The size of the Socialist vote will be a direct restraint upon either of the astute politicians of the major parties who seek the White house."

"It will be a direct inspiration to the masses of the people to keep up the fight, not only to hold America out of war, but to make America a safer and happier country by giving her a dynamic democracy."

Johnson Advises Kennedy to 'Get in Step With Yourself'

BY HUGH S. JOHNSON

New York City—
Hon. Joe Kennedy
U. S. Ambassador to Great Britain—or vice versa
Dear Joe:

So you flew home to make a list minute electioneering speech for the indispensable man. How could you be spared from your listening post in "your front line trenches?" Because you positionally denied that the indispensable one is getting us into Britain's war, millions think you came because the country is convinced that he is doing just that and will vote against that certain dictatorship, Mr. Big. Surely needed somebody to "say it ain't so, Joe—say it ain't so." But will people believe you any more than him and if so, why?

You quoted that great military expert, Walter Lippmann, that day far we will send troops is absurd because the Atlantic is there and there are no ships or landings. The allies said exactly that in 1917. Ten months later they were crying for "troops in their undershirts" and we sent 2,000,000 men. They found plenty of shipping and ports when they got us.

on the hook. Hello, suckers. Can't we ever learn? Do we always bite at the same old bait?

You say this is a war of machines, that the British want our equipment, not our men, and that it takes more tonnage to ship machines than men. If you will consult the authorities, you will learn that it takes more tonnage to ship and supply a 1918 model army than a modern mechanized force of equal fire-power but fewer men.

You say the British don't want to equip an army because then they couldn't get so much out of their equipment. Again and word for word, that is exactly what they said in 1917—and afterward cursed us for not fighting quickly enough fully equipped. We got to equip an army whether we send it abroad or not. In your next breath you say so yourself.

You also say that, if Hitler can't cross 20 miles of English channel, he can't cross the Atlantic. Right. But also in your next breath, you say that we must elect Mr. Indispensable to keep Hitler from crossing the Atlantic. Why not get in step with yourself?

You Must Support Ally
"Wherever He Has To Go"

Once you get into a war, Joe, you can't tell where you will fight. It will be wherever "defeat threatens or victory beckons." If you get in with an ally, you must support him wherever he has to go—to die for dear old Dong Dang or to battle in the Balkans.

Joe, this country expects a big electioneering emotional explosion. Secretary Hull was to start it Saturday by knocking in Japan's teeth in a speech. So we extravagantly chartered four great liners to "evacuate" all Americans from Asia—14,000 from Japan. That show was a flop and a flare-back. Mr. Hull learned in time that such a fake electioneering use of his high office would destroy public confidence in his great integrity.

When the first ship arrived, many Americans, who were on the ground, gave the trumped up "danger" the bird and declined to be evacuated. Seven thousand of the 14,000 "Americans" were Japanese who just happened to be born under the flag in Hawaii. Mr. Hull demeaned and diluted his fiery speech with kindness.

Kept A Stranger Silence? Before Talk With 'Boss'

You don't have enough public confidence to need to worry so much about it. You aren't Cordell Hull. Our press somehow got the impression that you were hurrying home to "break" with your boss and, by a strange silence, you let them think so until you had seen Mr. Roosevelt. That silence scared the Janissaries stiff. You didn't by any chance use that situation to make a shot-gun deal about becoming the Bernie Baruch of the new world war?

I hope not, because that also takes more confidence than you enjoy. Too many friends remember your taking big jobs for kudos and getting out while the getting was good without doing anything, and your sulphurous and sometimes silly skinning of your big boss in private while you were kissing his foot in public.

Your air sponsor was the "Kennedy family." Isn't that just another name for "Somerset Importers, Limited," monopoly purveyors of health - and - character - building Scotch whiskey and youth-uplift gin? With all that shipping shortage and British export quotas, is it good business to check out as ambassador to England just now? Goodbye, Joe. Be good and you will be happy.

Band Honors Retiring Chief; Fights Over His Successor

Kimberly—As Milton Herberg, village board which is expected to act at its regular meeting Monday evening, Dr. Maas, president of the commission, gave a talk in honor of Prof. Heynem at the rehearsal last night and then presented him with a gift. Heynem said he enjoyed the long stay with the Kimberly band and during his talk became emotional and wept. He then bade each member goodbye.

Village Clerk Paul Locks Schmidt announced that persons confined to their homes and wishing to cast their votes on election day, Nov. 5, must notify the clerk before midnight Saturday.

Extra deputies were on duty last night because of Halloween. Besides Chief of Police John Bernhardt and Night Patrolman Martin Keyers, James Gaffney, John Fox, Henry Melcher and Peter Verbeten were assigned.

A birthday party was held Wednesday evening in honor of Mrs. John Fox at her home at 146 John street. Cards were played and high honors went to Nick Fox and Mrs. Fred Fox. Those attending were Mr. and Mrs. Nick Fox, Appleton; Mr. and Mrs. Fred Fox, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Fox, and Mr. and Mrs. Norman Robinson.

A large number of high school students gathered around a huge bonfire which set off the opening of the high school homecoming Thursday evening. While the fire was burning selections were played by the high school band.

Strange Things Turn Tides Of Elections in Democracy

BY RAYMOND CLAPPER

New York—On what issues is this historic election turning? What questions decide the attitude of the voters and turn states either to Roosevelt or Willkie? I wonder.

The big issue in New York today is the fact that Stephen T. Early, White House secretary, put his knee in the stomach of a Negro policeman who tried to keep him from boarding the presidential train in New York a few nights ago. It's going to mean a lot of votes for Willkie in Harlem, they say. So if New York is close that may tip the balance. And so on.

This knee punch, executed squarely amidst the of a Negro policeman by a Virginia Democrat who works for Roosevelt, is supposed to offset the recent promotion of a Negro to be a general in the army.

Oh, that isn't the only issue. There are a lot of them. Both sides have them. Willkie is the candidate of Hitler. The Democrats had that issue up again today. Ambassador Joe Kennedy came back from London to plug for Roosevelt. He's going to head up the defense commission; that was the deal, so the political talk runs. And don't you know why John L. Lewis came out for Willkie? Shame on you. First it is part of a secret plot by the communists who control Lewis to get rid of Roosevelt. They used to like Roosevelt until they discovered he didn't like Hitler. Then they put John L. Lewis to work. Well, that wasn't the only reason. Lewis also supported Willkie because he would get a place in the Willkie cabinet, so Lewis has to deny that one.

Recently a newspaper reader from the middle west wrote in and said: "You newspaper birds may know what you are writing about but I want to tell you that you are dealing in fine distinctions that don't mean a thing to us. You write about high-falootin' questions. You are doing a lot of fancy figure-skating and nobody is watching you."

I suspect he may be right. In Illinois the Republicans told me the Elliott Roosevelt affair was their best issue. Democrats said that if they lost Illinois it would be because of that.

The Roosevelt family is supposed to have cleaned up a fortune in this way and that. An employer is supposed to have put slips in his pay envelopes warning his employees that they could expect no more raises for five years if Roosevelt was re-elected. The Republican national committee is issuing daily instruction sheets to its workers telling them how to answer whispering campaigns. Time and again these instruction sheets have antici-ated whispering attacks by two or three days.

I asked one party publicity director why they put out certain things which don't stand up under facts. He said the answer was obvious. If they issued only mild attacks nobody would pay any attention. Only by rough stuff could they get into print.

It does make me cynical. After reporting politics for 20 years one is prepared to encounter anything. But it does discourage one to see such counterfeit political coin passing around at the height of such an important campaign. Democracy is supposed to be the form of government which requires the highest level of public intelligence. When one looks back over political history and sees the trivial issues which have played such an important part in elections, the surprising thing is that we have been able to make such good decisions. They say God works in mysterious ways his wonders to perform. It must be the same with democracy.

Wise decisions often result from poor reasons. Some one said about Roosevelt that although his motives might be in question, although his sincerity might be in doubt, he has a knack of getting on the right side of questions. Perhaps that is true of our politics generally, and perhaps out of this muck of rumor that is being churned up in both political parties, a result is taking shape that will rise far above the premises which are bringing it about.

Milwaukee-Green Bay Link Blot on State Road System

Post-Crescent Madison bureau Madison — The state's public road system, in general, is adequate to meet potential military and defense needs to the degree that it is sufficient for ordinary civil use demands, according to E. L. Roettiger, state highway engineer of the Wisconsin highway commission.

"There is no question that deficiencies exist in the highway service afforded existing peace-time or civil traffic. It follows, then," he said, "that in a national defense emergency, with double or treble peacetime demands, on certain roads existing deficiencies now extremely critical and grave would be in dire need of correction."

The state highway expert selected the link between metropolitan, industrialized Milwaukee, with the Lake Winnebago, Fox river valley and Green Bay area as an example of such a deficiency.

(The state highway commission has tentative plans for the further reconstruction of Highway 41 between the two industrial regions, but they are still in the discussion stage due to limited financial resources. Ed. Note).

"Major Deficiency" Roettiger called the route connecting the two areas "probably the major deficiency in the strategic network in this state."

"Here we find the oldest pavements, with lowest standard of alignment, gradient, and roadbed, with lowest traffic capacity due to such conditions, which at the present time carries a volume of traf-

Bedore Will Make Statue of Nicolet

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau Madison—Sidney Bedore, prominent Wisconsin sculptor, will do the Jean Nicolet memorial statue which will be erected on the state capitol grounds here, the Jean Nicolet memorial commission here has decided.

The commission, headed by John Callahan, state superintendent of public instruction, and Robert Desmareau, Green Bay, announced the commission to the Lake Geneva artist, who is a direct descendant of Charles De Langlade, first white settler in Wisconsin.

The monument to the first white man to set foot in Wisconsin in 1634 will be 8 feet in height, exclusive of the base on which it will be mounted. It will be set in capitol park at one of the main entrances to the state capitol building.

Cost of the monument is being borne by a fund raised by voluntary subscriptions by the commission, chosen under authority of 1939 legislative action.
